SOME OF US HAVE TUBERCULAR SOULS

MISS STAFFORD SO TELLS CO-EDS AT VESPER SERVICES

Urges Reading of the Bible As a Part of One's General Education

"Some of us are very tubercular and narrow when it comes to the size of our souls," said Miss Elinor Stafford at vesper services last evening. Miss Millar is an English woman from Australia. She expects to be in the city about two weeks, the guest of the club women here.

"You should read your Bible as a part of your general education," said Miss Millar. "There is a natural law in the spiritual world just as there is a natural law in the physical world. The Bible is to our spirit what food is to the body; it is for the development of the muscles of the soul. It isn't only bread, it is dessert also."

Miss Millar believes that the classics of music and art cannot be understood without a working knowledge of the Bible, because so many of the old masterpieces have used the Bible for background. She spoke also of the many times Shakespeare and Browning quote it. "It is positively wicked not to have a working knowledge of the Bible."

The meeting was conducted by Mrs. Samuel Avery, Gertrude Munger sang. The plans for the Bible study club were announced by Miss Fanny Drake. The life of Paul is to be taken up this year.

2,000 CHEERING STUDENTS BID GODSPEED TO TEAM

were co-eds, who established a precedent by marching in a parade down O street, gathered on Twelfth street after the rally and formed in three sections, each of which extended a little over a block. The band headed the first section, followed by a block-full of screeching co-eds. Followed the carryall with the team, pulled by a dozen tugging men. Close on the heels of the carryall came a long line of men, and then the huge ear of corn, symbol of Nebraska, decorated for the occasion and carried by a squad of boys. An even longer string of men brought up the rear.

Marching east on Q and south on Sixteenth, the parade halted for a moment at the corner of Sixteenth and O streets and the entire supply of Lincoln's red torches and Roman candles was distributed as evenly as possible among the throng. With the band playing, with spontaneous cheering and yelling, with darting, popping fireworks and the flaring pop of the torches, the long line swung up O street, practically paralyzing traffic until it passed. In the center of the procession rode the team silently acknowledging this tribute, visual and audible, paid to their prowess.

Sidewalks Crowded

Crowds swept up the sidewalks on both sides, keeping even with the parade as it continued down the street, and a flock of cars spurred on ahead. Despite the jams and the shooting of fireworks, no accidents of any kind occurred.

Little attention was paid by the paraders to the unprotected trolley poles, and only once or twice did anyone take the trouble to jerk a pole from the wire. In this respect the parade was unique, just as it was in the fact that co-eds took a very big and active part in it.

When the line reached the Northwestern station at Ninth and S streets, it streamed through the building into the train yard, where two of the coaches which are carrying the team were already coupled. The yard was filled to overflowing, and the station itself was crowded. Men and co-eds pressed around the players and as many as could reach them shook hands and wished them good luck. Those farther back waited impatiently until the team, with Dr. and Mrs. Stewart and "Dick" Rutherford and his wife were all deposited in the parlor car, when concerted yells immediately arose for different members of the team.

Captain Corey Appeared

Captain Corey was the first to appear. "Fellows," he said, "this is the biggest thing that's ever been pulled off at Nebraska; with this sendoff we can't help but win." A deafening shout of approval greeted the captain's speech. Otoupalik, Moser and "Dick" Rutherford were called by turn, and in turn expressed their deep appreciation of the spirit the students had shown, and said it would be impossible to lose under such conditions.

Slowly the crowd moved away, and only a small portion of the thousands remained to cheer the men as the train pulled out. This was in accordance with the wishes of the coaching staff, which hustled the men off to bed as soon as their Pullman was coupled on.

Dr. Stewart's suitcase, containing the magic articles by which he is said to have helped to keep the Oregon "Aggies" in fit trim for their game with the Michigan "Aggies" a year ago, when the westerners made a journey 800 miles longer than the Huskers are undertaking, was missed from the pile of suitcases in Memorial hall after the rally, and up to a short time before the train pulled out had not been found. It is thought possible that it was mixed up among the band suitcases.

The Train

The train in which the team, band and business men will make the long trip, is all of steel, and consists of a combined dynamo and baggage car, a tourist sleeping car of sixteen sections for members of the band, a standard Pullman of the same size for members of the football squad, two additional standard sleepers for others making the trip, a dining car, and an observation and parlor car. The train went to Fremont over the Northwestern road. There it switched to the Union Pacific, where it will stay until it reaches Portland. Daily stops will be made by the team at different points along the way, when the Cornhuskers will get out for a little airing and a swift bit of practice.

LAST HARD SCRIMMAGE FOR OREGON AGGIES

STEWART PUT SQUAD THROUGH LONG HARD WORK

Donnegan Added to Number of Men Who Will Make Trip—23 Now Going

A little bit of everything was tried out on Nebraska field in preparation for the Oregon Aggies. Tackling the dummy, blocking, punting, charging, receiving kickoffs and going down under kickoffs were all on the program last night.

Scrimmage for the evening was long and hard. The only advantage gained from it was in teaching the varsity the new plays. No plays have been learned by the scrubs that the Oregon team is using. Practice in stopping their plays will come during the trip when more of their style is learned.
