DALE AND JOHNSON ADDRESS PRE-MEDICS

Society Favors Plan of Including Hospital Corps in Cadet Regiment

A vivid description of the work of royal army medical corps behind the British front in France was given over 100 medics at pre-medical smoker at the Beta Theta Pi house last evening. Dr. Phil M. Dale, '09, just returned from Europe, where he served with the Chicago unit of the Royal Medical army corps chosen by the late Dr. Murphy of Chicago.

Dr. A. A. Johnson, a graduate of Western Reserve, now affiliated with the department of pathology, University of Nebraska, college of medicine at Omaha, described the progress made by the Nebraska college since its establishment and said that at the present time it was one of the largest and best medical colleges in the middle west. More new men have been added to its faculty in the last five years than to any other, and today Nebraska has the largest number of faculty men devoting their time exclusively to instruction.

A report from the military science department in regard to a hospital corps to be composed entirely of pre-medics was given, in which Commandant Parker was quoted as saying that he would request the war department to grant a hospital corps at Nebraska if the men were favorable. The proposition was approved practically unanimously.

The date for the annual pre-medical dance was set for November 24 at Rosewilde.

nected with handling of accounts can be eliminated and the business expedited to a great extent.

The assembled treasurers will discuss a proposed permanent organization of University treasurers which would be formed for mutual benefit. It would then be possible for the treasurers to meet at definite times for discussion, and a series of instructive talks on accounting and organization could be arranged.

The College World

Call Him "Father"

Boys, when you speak of your father don't call him "the old man." Of course you are older now than when you were taught to call him father. You are much smarter than you were then, you are much more manly looking, your clothes fit you better, your hat has a modern shape and your hair is combed differently.

In short "fyer" than you were then. Our father has a last year's coat, a two-year-old hat and a vest of still older pattern. He can't write such an elegant note as you can and all that, but don't call him the "old man." Call him father. For years he has been rustling around to get things together. He has been held to the thorny path of uphill industry and the brightest half of life has gone from him forever. But he loves you, though he goes along without saying much about it. Therefore be not so ungrateful.—Spokane Sportman Review.

Students and Money

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university, believes in the simple life. He has notified parents of prospective students that, if they insist on endowing their hopeful sons and daughters with more money than may be needed for simple living, Stanford university would rather have them go elsewhere to spend it.

The learned doctor, in a letter which he has addressed to parents, ventures the statement that "it takes time to run an automobile and it often leads to life off the campus, extravagance and much foolishness," and he adds that "the student who cannot be content to lead the clean, simple, industrious life expected on the Stanford campus should go elsewhere." Experience has shown, the writer explains, that the poor boy has, on the whole, made a better record, both as a student and afterward, than the young man or woman with too much money to spend.

Many are in Oregon, some with the silver beginning to creep into their hair, to whose minds the words of Dr. Wilbur will bring back dimming memories of "quad" and "camp." They can tell the names of those whose records prove the truth of Dr. Wilbur's contention, for Oregon has men familiar to the progress of the state who used to learn their economics behind the handle of Dr. Jordan's lawnmower or while waiting on table in the Encina dining room.

A big bankroll does not, ordinarily, coax its young possessor to worship at the shrine of Minerva so ardently as at some other shrines. A pocket full of money is more apt to stuff the stomach with pleasure than the head with knowledge. And this applies not at Stanford alone, but everywhere.—Oregon Journal.

Mead Memorial Chapel Presented with Chimes

Chimes, practically the same as those in the chimes tower at the University of Washington, have just been installed in the Mead memorial chapel of Middlebury college, Middlebury, Conn. They were presented to the college by John Abner and Mary Sherman Mead. Five programs were given on the chimes. On dedication Sunday a sacred concert was given, and on five other days programs were given with selections varying from grand opera to rollicking melodies which savored slightly of ragtime.—Ex.
