Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Chancellor Emeritus Elisha Benjamin Andrews was seventy-three years old yesterday. Ten or fifteen years ago when Dr. Andrews was chancellor of the University of Nebraska, his was a familiar and beloved figure on the campus—a figure tall, erect and with a commanding personality. He always wore a Prince Albert coat and there were "creases in his gray trousers that would cut." He walked about the campus with his head high in the air, and when the cadets saluted him when they met, they did it with the respect and admiration which he commanded.

Chancellor Andrews meant what he said, and there are many amusing stories about him to that effect. One day he was requested to speak before a certain literary society at 8 o'clock in U hall. At 8 o'clock he was in the appointed room. No one else was there but he began his speech, without delay. About fifteen minutes later, the president of the society sidled in and about 8:30 there were several other members in attendance. A few minutes after that Dr. Andrews finished his speech, thanked them for their attention and left the room!

When he said that the Commencement parade should start at 10 o'clock, it started at 10 o'clock. All this is to show that even in small things he was a man of purpose and determination.

He came to the University at a time when there was much antagonism between different organizations; when the legislature was "upset" over various conditions. He put the legislature on its feet; the "dissent in the ranks" was silenced. Chancellor Andrews was the man who put the state farm on the map, and in that thing alone he has given the University an addition which has raised the importance and standing of the school to the high rank it now holds.

Chancellor Emeritus Andrews is one of the greatest men both in a scholarly and in an executive way that the University of Nebraska has or ever will see, and every Nebraskan is filled with pride and love for the man who so materially helped the school to be what it is.

Blanks on which a student may state whether or not he favors a single tax at the University of Nebraska will be given to each one at second semester registration.

On these blanks, there will be a space for the student to tell whether his parents approve of the single tax—and because of this, Nebraskans are urged to get in touch with the "holders of the purse strings" and discuss the matter with them.

There will be a blank space for the number of hours for which each person has registered so that the man or woman who is carrying two hours will not have as much weight as the one carrying eighteen. In this way a representative vote will be taken and if there are two thousand who are in favor of the single tax the matter will be considered important enough to be brought before the regents.

Arguments both for and against the single tax will appear in The Daily Nebraskan from day to day, and the students are urged to have a definite opinion formed on the question by the time to vote at registration.

Ohio—A University prof here claims that anyone that studies during the holidays deserves to fall in that course. Of course this does not apply to those who are really trying to do advance work, but to those who are so shiftless as to let their work pile up and then have to study to catch up.—Ex.

Oklahoma—The University of Oklahoma claims to have the largest geology department in the world. There are 400 students enrolled in the department, and 62 are majoring in this subject. Oil accounts for much of this interest.—Ex.

California—California University is going to try to aid in bringing about world peace. An association has been formed that is going to get the names of as many students as possible to sign a petition for peace and thus aid President Wilson in whatever efforts he makes.—Ex.

Kansas—The athletic association has just issued its third request for the return of football suits and shoes which have been in use during the past season. The difficulty seems to be that the men entered the game to come out with new and complete outfits and are now holding them as personal property.—Ex.
