13TH AND P

VENUS 10¢ PENCIL

No matter what course you're taking you need this famous pencil!

BECAUSE of the superlative quality of material and workmanship, VENUS is admittedly the finest pencil it is possible to make.

If you like a thick soft lead that marks so that you can read the writing half way across the room, choose the soft degrees 6B-5B-4B.

For short-hand notes or easy writing 3B-2B-B (medium soft) are popular.

For sketching, general writing purposes, etc., HB-F-H-2H (medium) will prove desirable.

For drafting, a medium hard pencil gives the best results and you'll like 3H-4H-5H-6H.

For very thin, narrow lines for extremely accurate graphical charts, maps, details, etc., 7H-8H-9H are available.

Look for the distinctive water mark finish on each of the 17 black degrees and hard and medium copying.

Your professors will confirm these statements as to the merits of VENUS pencils.

For sale at the college book store.

TWO CLUBS FORM ON DRILL PROBLEM

Jensen quoted former Governor C. H. Aldrich in opposition to military training in the University, and thanked God for him. Then he started upon an argument to show that even with voluntary drill the University would not lose its federal funds, but this part of his talk was cut short by the chairman, who read in the evening paper, a statement to that effect by the chancellor.

Col. Maher Entered

He sat down, and there was a momentary pause, when Col. Maher strode in. He asked the chairman if the meeting was to take action against drill, and said he had a few things he wanted to say. He declined to be quieted when Sorenson said this was a meeting of Baptists, and Methodists were out of place, and responded to the cries of "Speech," and "Let's hear him," from the drill sympathizers. Colonel Maher said first that he was proud of every boy at the meeting, and felt sure they all wanted to do right, but he reminded them of their youth. Then he launched into a fiery talk in favor of preparing every citizen to defend America, if need should arise, and he earnestly assured them that if they took the step contemplated, they would regret it some day. He asked for the privilege of being allowed to say a few words if there was a joint debate on the subject, and he left the room while three cheers were given for him by the militarists.

After Colonel Maher left, those who held views opposed to those who called the meeting, went to another part of the hotel, to gird up their loins for the fray. The men who called the meeting had no opposition from then on, the forty who remained being in full sympathy, or else more interested observers.

Charles E. Schofield declared that this government was founded on a principle opposed to compulsory military service, and that the time had come to take a stand against it in the University. When he finished a nominating committee of Schofield, Woods and Lilliefors was appointed, and they withdrew to the lobby.

Rep. Norton Called On

While they were gone, Representative J. M. Norton, an alumnus of the University, was called upon. He expressed his opposition to military drill being compulsory.

Then Anton Jensen again took the floor, and explained why the meeting was called at the Lindell. He referred to the rules regarding the calling of extraordinary meetings on the campus, and the power the chancellor or executive dean have to adjourn such meetings. When he had done the committee returned, recommending the officers who were selected.

Then Jensen offered some resolutions which were adopted, which declared that the supposed benefits of drill could be better secured by gymnasium and athletic sports, that spreading propaganda for militarism was no part of a state university curricula, and petitioning the legislature to abolish compulsory drill, at the same time pledging the members of the organization to secure the submission of the question by the initiative and the referendum, if the legislature does not act.

Wahlfred Jacobsen moved, and it was adopted, that all sign their names to a pledge to abide by the cause. This was done after the meeting.

A committee of the rival organization entered, composed of Henry Pascale, Leonard Kline and Charles M. Frey. They requested a joint debate. This and the question of finances, was left to the executive committee.

Sorenson then made an appeal for extra quarters, to help pay for the hall, and after some other business, the meeting was adjourned.

PHI ALPHA TAU

WHO NAMED IT

"THE RAG?" THEY ASK

"Why is The Daily Nebraskan called the 'Rag'?" is a question often heard on the campus and yet very few can answer it.

The first editor-in-chief of the paper was Frank Riley, who was graduated in 1898. As a consequence of his position he was given a surname which made the young man justly famous. He began to be called "Rag Riley" and simultaneously his paper began to be called the "Rag." The title has stuck with the tenacity of glue and because of its very inappropriateness has been good advertising.

Everything goes, even the choice productions from "Society Brand." Everything marked in plain sale prices from which there is no recourse, nor guess work.
