The College Idea

Every man in college should begin in his freshman year to take part in some college activity outside of his

Keeping the Mind Clean

The test of manhood and character is in the ability to keep the mind clean. Were this no difficult task the world would have reached its millennium ages ago; in fact the serpent would not now be crawling on his belly nor Adam and Eve have yielded up the garden and the Garden of Eden passed out of existence.

Neither would Alexander have died in his twenties, nor would Nero have sacked Rome. Neither would crime have been begotten nor would men, women and children by the millions be suffering the poverty of the reign of economic terror today.

An evil thought conceived, may, like a sulphur match, lie dormant until struck, and then if at the wrong moment and in the wrong place father the flame whose destructive path is a harvest of love's labor lost, crime and wretchedness.

"Mind is the Master power that moulds and makes. And man is mind, and evermore he takes

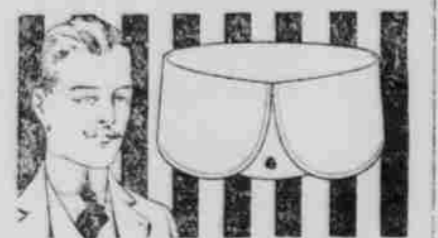

The tool of thought, and, shaping what he wills, Brings forth a thousand joys, a thousand ills:— He thinks in secret, and it comes to pass: Environment is but his looking glass." —James Allen.

The reformers are continually look-studies and should continue it during his college career. By so doing the students become better acquainted with each other and become broader so that they are more able and better fitted to go out into the business world.

The old idea that a college is a place where one goes to study and nothing more, is generally dying out and the new idea that other activities count for as much as the studies is taking its place. This idea seems to have been taken up most strongly by the men who belong to the different organizations of the college, but the truth of it should be realized by other students as well. Every man should get everything possible out of his college life and in order to do this he must take up other work than that offered by his courses of study.—The Bachelor.
