pampered when he is young grows up to be a spendthrift. The records of money which has been spent is not nearly so important, Miss Ravenhill said, as an estimated record of what is to be spent.

Bettering of Humanity Aim

"It is perfectly true," Miss Ravenhill declared, "that unless our wagons are hitched to stars, we are likely to let them jog along in muddy ruts. The end of all learning is the betterment of human life. The whole keynote of progress is co-operation. We need group work. Greatest is he who serves. Uniformity is the last thing needed in life, diversity is what is needed by mankind."

Miss Ravenhill spoke in a very interesting and enjoyable manner. She is distinctly English in her pronunciation and choice of words. Many of her illustrations were quaintly humorous.
