SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS LEVY

Holds in Sinclair Case That City Tax to Aid Campus Extension Is Valid

The supreme court of Nebraska Saturday handed down the decision that the levy of the city of Lincoln for campus extension is valid by upholding the decree of the county court in the protest against the levy made by Thomas Sinclair, who lives near the State Farm campus. The opinion was written by Judge Sedgwick.

The campus levy was made by the city of Lincoln as a result of a promise to the citizens of the state that, if the institution should stay at the present city campus, the state would not be required to pay over $200,000 for additional acreage.

No Benefits for Him

In his suit first in county and then in the supreme court, Sinclair sought to prove that the tax was not valid and contended that it made him pay for benefits which he did not receive. He also charged that it not only failed to benefit him, but injured him in that the campus extension would have brought new buildings to the Farm—his vicinity—instead of to the city campus, had the removal issue carried.

The holding of the court was that the levy was constitutional and that there are cases when a person may be called upon to sacrifice some rights for the greatest good to the greatest number.

Following are excerpts from the opinion on the case:

"The corporate authorities of cities may be authorized by statute to assess and collect taxes for all corporate purposes."

"The question for the city authorities to consider was the benefit of the city at large and the fact that some parts of the city were or might be benefited more than other parts would not render the tax invalid. Individuals may be called upon to sacrifice some rights to the greatest good to the greatest number."

THE UKULELE

THE languorous charm of the Hawaiian native instruments—so moving in appeal, so observably in vogue—is strikingly characteristic of the Ukulele. Its tone possesses that curiously beautiful timbre, that exotic charm of tonal quality which has made these instruments so sensationally popular.

The Ukulele has a pleasing grace of form. The finer models are made of genuine Hawaiian Koa wood. It is much in request today among the smarter college and other musical organizations.

It is easy to learn. Its price includes an Instruction Book.

Hawaiian Steel Guitar

Every chord struck upon this typically representative Hawaiian instrument is marked by a weird, plaintive harmony and strangely beautiful qualities of tone. It brings, to any music, qualities full of vivid color and varied charm.

Price $8.00 and upwards, including Steel and Set of Three Thumbes for playing, and Instruction Book.

Catalog on application.
