year. If kept to supply milk it would supply the same amount of strength to twenty soldiers for one year and that besides this, the dairy cow will give the dairyman a calf every year.

Efficient Purchasing

Prof. L. W. Chase spoke in connection with the report of the farm implement committee and urged the farmers to anticipate their needs in the implement line as much as possible, in order that manufacturers may know in time what is required. He also urged that whenever possible the farmers use their old implements instead of throwing them away to get new ones. The resolutions presented by the committee and adopted by the congress provided for farmer's meetings to be called in every county in the state within thirty days, so that the implement situation may be explained to them.

High praise for the state's first move in meeting problems arising from the war was C. W. Pugsley. He expressed pride in the manner in which Nebraska and other middle west states are "going at things," and declared that they are making a bigger showing than eastern states.

Among other things, Prof. Pugsley presented to the agriculture committee and to members of congress the views of Nebraska farmers on the revenue and food bills. These opin-

America leads the world in the scientific manufacture of men's ready-to-wear clothing. Here the industry has developed to a fine art. Here style is king and each year a greater number of men voluntarily enlist under the "flag of fashion."

are among the royal family of stylish clothes, but they demand tribute from no man. Americans are famous for their ability to size up a situation and for quick action. Some few years ago one of the well-known makers saw that the American public could not buy any one suit of medium price with absolute assurance as to its standard of quality and its style. This maker decided, therefore, to center every energy of his organization in standardizing a suit of medium price, of correct style, of intrinsic worth.

ions were formulated at a conference of representatives of farmers' organizations in the state, called by Prof. Pugsley a short time ago.

Prof. W. W. Burr, urged attention to future crops, since he pointed out that the crops of this year are pretty well ground. He declared that much of the seed planted and sown this year is of the slow germinating kind, for the reason that this year the kernels have particularly hard shells or hulls which absorb moisture slowly.

There is wheat enough in the state right now, he said, to seed the wheat fields next fall, but it is being hoarded.

Professor Burr urged the stacking of grain this fall farther than leaving grain in the shock unless the farmer knows that he can get it threshed immediately after it is cut and dry enough to thresh. This he urged after harvest to allow an opportunity to plow the fields to get them in shape for the crops to be put in for next year.
