THE VACATION CALL

About this time of the year, when everyone is getting tired of classes and studying, the call of vacation time is heard above the voice of the professor, and the word is written across the leaves of the textbook. The hunger for a change, the old homesickness, rise again in one; and the scent of the country air, or even of Main street, fills the nostrils. And stronger even than that, is the odor from the kitchen at home.

Now is the time to exhort the student public to redouble labor over books, to study far into the night and early into the morning for those final examinations that are upon us. Buckle to your tasks, students, and end the year with flying colors. But the nights are cool, inviting sleep, and the morning is all shiny with the early sun, and the birds have already struck up their matins.

After all, the two weeks left are short enough time to spend with friends, to make them forget your crabbiness. Why study too hard? Everybody's going to war to get shot and killed before next September, anyway.

REGISTERING FOR DRAFT

University men should become familiar with the rules for registering for the draft. Every man between 21 and 31 must register. Students who vote in Lincoln should register in their precinct in this city. Students who vote out of town should get registration blanks from the city clerk at the Lincoln city hall, and mail the cards, filled out, to their home precinct so that they will reach their before June 5, the draft day. The card should be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, for the return of the certificate of registration.

The response of the University to the appeal made by the Red Cross was splendid. The University has also been contributing generously to the fund for the French war orphans. Now comes the Y. M. C. A., with a cause fully as worthy as these two, making an appeal equally as strong to the patriotism of the students. The University should be as ready with its gifts.

"VIGOROUS AND MANLY," IS IDEAL MAN

Those Harvard boys who framed the virtuous code of morals for the Ideal Girl and all the contributors to the sad but recent I. G. contest held by our contemporary, the Smokestack, have nothing on the versatile and enterprising rosy cheeked ones that frequent the classic halls and walls of the University of Cincinnati.

The Cincy women have come back strong, with a chilled steel, razor edged set of commandments for the Ideal Man. They, very cautiously, do not specify whether his hair shall be light or Francis X. Bushmanlike, nor do they trifle with any other personalities. The Queen City girls, however, are very strong for the Galahad type. Their one best bet must be "athletic" and "vigorous and physically manly," but they take pains to point out his mental and moral essentials.

How do you measure up with this inventory, Mr. Oberlin Man?

"He is vigorous and manly, physically, and careful of the details of his appearance.

"He has a sense of humor.

"He is courteous to every one.

"He is thoughtful of other people.

"He is tactful.

"His education is sufficiently broad to enable him to appreciate the finer things of culture.

"He enjoys sports.

"He can appreciate the fireside.

"He is ambitious for worth-while things. He has an aim in life.

"He has religious faith.

"He has courage, strength of purpose and self-control."—Purdue Exponent.

THE COLLEGE WORLD

Yale to Have Benefit Game

Feeling the effect of sport stagnation, Yale baseball players are urging the scheduling of a series of games with Harvard for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. Cancellation of athletics has found no favor with the athletes.—Ex.

"Don't Care" Attitude

American patriotism contains an element of superficiality that is discouraging to say the least. More than fifty years ago Philip Nolan shouted: "Damn the United States. I wish I may never hear of the United States again." The Harvard Crimson says: "today, as in the days of the Civil War, this sore of blasphemy is scarce, yet a new feeling has come into vogue, quite as dangerous as that of the 'man without a country,' and far more widespread," and then continues:

"It is the 'don't care' attitude of the citizen who has never bothered to learn the national anthem, who looks on the flag merely as a holiday banner. Last Saturday the men in the Boston crowds who uncovered as the colors passed were exceptional. Hardly a voice was raised in protest against the hundreds who did not. Stupidly good-natured and lackadaisical, they were there to see the glitter and color, to hear the bands play, and, quite naturally, to stare at Marshal Joffre. And in the midst of all the spirit of celebration, to the thousands who lined the streets the flag seemed to have no particular signal.

"Many of the American people today have not yet waked up to the real meaning of the flag. For nearly half a century we have rested in comparative ease and luxury. Save for the brief campaigns of the Spanish War, the colors have been used largely as part of the bright dress of holiday rejoicings, of national anniversaries. They have not, in the thoughts of the present generation, been closely associated with the blood and grime of battlefields, with the sort of self-sacrifice of which a man offers the best that he has—his life.

"But this sleepily forgetfulness must stop. If we are to enter the fight a nation united in one cause we must be conscious of the traditions of the flag, of the battles of the Revolution and the Civil War, which made the United States 'safe' until today, 'for democracy.' We must look up to the flag once more as the standard of our forefathers, as the symbol of the ideals which we, as a democratic nation, stand ready to defend."—Ex.

Co-Ed War Service

We have been hearing much about what the men are doing in the way of preparation for war, but comparatively little about what the co-eds are doing. Quite a number of the men have already enlisted for active service, almost all of the men are taking part in some form of military drill, while a great many who are unable to enlist in the service are preparing to go to the farms and assist in enlarging the food production for this year.

Naturally, the first and immediate duty would involve the men. The time has not arrived when the women will play as important a part in the struggle as the men. As man after man leaves for the training camps some one must take his place. Not only must these positions be filled, but a great amount of work must be done in addition to the regular work in time of peace. The number of men available will be insufficient. The women must step to the front. Here in our own university there is a great amount of work to be done. While we are hoping that the war will be over before the beginning of school next year, we cannot lay our plans upon this assumption. The University of Pittsburg must go on as before. If it is necessary the authorities stand ready to give all our buildings and equipment to the government for whatever service they see fit.
