THE CHANCELLOR'S RECEPTION

One of the first duties members of the freshmen class owe themselves and one another is to get together. If college life is to mean more to them than class routine, the quicker they meet on common ground with those who have interests in common with them, the better the chances that this very important side of their education will not be neglected. To bring freshmen together informally, the principle purpose of the chancellor's reception for new students in Art hall, second floor of the Library building, Saturday evening. Here freshmen will meet one another and spend an hour or two in talking over their "first impressions" and future plans. The importance of the reception cannot be overestimated. The class room is a poor place to make acquaintances. Seat neighbors for a semester are likely to know very little more about each other at the end of the semester than at the start. Only informal gatherings will bring any large number of freshmen together in a spirit for striking friendships, and such gatherings are so few that new students cannot afford to miss any of them.

THE OTHER MAN'S OPINION

There are many things that big men learn outside of their actual pursuit of knowledge, and one of the most important of these is what Thomas Jegeron in the Declaration of Independence calls a decent respect for the opinions of mankind. But at no time in life does a man have a better opportunity to learn this lesson than during his college days. In the divergent opinions of his fellow students he has laboratory material that cannot be improved upon. College men and women, reaching out into the Unknown, grasping a few fragments of knowledge, and displaying these with all the authority of a Solomon, are conceded to be the most radical thinkers—rather the most radical believers—in the world. But it is radicalism that denotes progress; the impracticable dream of yesterday is the fact of tomorrow. Study of the opinions of your fellow students is likely to reveal to you that, in addition to the comical ideas of your roommate you hold one or two choice ones yourself. It takes lots of practice for most of us to see a proposition with the other man's eyes, but once we have gained the power to do this we are in possession of an asset that no inborn gift can surpass.

BRAVE LOVE

The Favorite Poem of James Whitcomb Riley

He'd nothing but his violin
I'd nothing but my song.
But we were wed when skies were blue
And summer days were long.
And when we rested by the hedge,
The robins came and told
How they had dared to woo and win
When early spring was cold.

We sometimes supped on dewberries,
Or slept among the hay.
But oft the farmers' wives at eve
Came out to hear us play
The rare old tunes—the dear old tunes—
We could not starve for long
While my man had his violin
And I my sweet love song.

The world has aye gone well with us,
Old man, since we were one—
Our homeless wandering down the lanes—
It long ago was done.

But those who wait for gold or gear,
For houses and for kine
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sere
And love and beauty tine,
Will never know the joy of hearts
That met without a fear.

When you had but your violin
And I a song, my dear.

Fall Suits?

From the many we are selling we realize we are offering exceptionally attractive garments.

The simplicity of the suits for fall recommends them. The materials are beautiful and the colorings rich and dignified. There are strictly tailored suits—many reflecting the military note and more dressy styles for more formal occasions. The coats for the most part are rather long extending in many instances below the knees.
