HISTORY OF OHIO STATE UNI TO BE PUBLISHED

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 16.—A history of the Ohio State University is soon to be published in book form. Provision for this was made when the board of trustees, at a recent meeting purchased the manuscript of the late Captain Alexis Cope. Arrangements have been made by which the manuscript will be edited by Dr. Thomas C. Mendenhall, a long-time friend of the historian, and himself for many years a member of the faculty and now professor emeritus of physics.

It is estimated that the history will make a book of 600 pages, and the expectation is to have it from the press not later than next year.

HUSKERS OFF ON EASTERN JUNKET

well suited for entertaining the Nebraska quintet. The Husker director answered nix to the proposal and closed up the matter.

Crowd Springs Surprise
"Saturday evening was the first time I can remember," said Coach Stewart yesterday, "that the crowd at a basketball game showed enough enthusiasm to yell and give the boys any encouragement from the sidelines." At the beginning of the second half, when the Cornhuskers began their spurt which tied the score and came within an ace of copping the fruit, some one in the crowd let out a little yap and that started the rest to cheering and they kept it up until the end. The players were not unaware of the spirit of the crowd and several commented on it after the game. "If the gym had been full and the excitement had begun at the start of the game, there would have been no holding us," the men said.

New Gym a Crying Need
This again brings up the problem of inadequate gymnasium facilities. There is not much incentive in going to a basketball game in the Nebraska attic where the spectators on the two lower rows of the bleachers are constantly in danger of having the players plunge into them and be pushed back into the crowd every time the ball goes out of bounds. During the preliminary game between the freshmen of Nebraska and Wesleyan, one of the suburbanites was thrown violently against the seats and had to be carried off the floor.

With a gymnasium of the Cornhuskers' dreams, all this would be different and the crowds would cheer and the teams would win and the management would pay out on expenses. A little sentiment on the part of the students in favor of the new athletic plant would bring the regents to the realization that the dream is a dire necessity and the time is ripe for asking the legislature for the necessary appropriation. As yet the university has not submitted its bill and the time limit of twenty days will soon be up.

FRATERNITY MEN UPSET TRADITION

Flower Custom Abolished
In order to further limit expenditure on university formals, the time-worn custom of sending flowers to girl partners, has been summarily abolished. The council took action to definitely prohibit any active fraternity man from giving flowers at his formal party. This is a direct hit at tradition, and goes to prove more strongly the spirit of economy prevalent among university fraternity men.

NEW GEOGRAPHY COURSES PLANNED

semester. This is a course on North America, the prime purpose of which is to know America better, and to bring the student in closer touch with the less familiar, but none the less important, natural resources of his own country. The instructors will be Professors Condra and Bengston. The field courses will run as usual, and these courses will be open to women as well as men. A portion of the main offices will be used as a drafting room, where students may prepare their soil maps.

One of the most interesting of the new courses will be that in technical photography, which will be in charge of Mr. Frank H. Shoemaker. Mr. Shoemaker has done much technical work for the state and also for several prominent universities, and is very experienced in this line of work. The course will be open only to advanced students, and can be taken by permission by persons who wish to enter either the state or federal service. Other work in the department of geography and conservation will proceed as usual.

RED CROSS WORKER SPEAKS HERE TODAY

a very interested university class and others will be started by the beginning of the next school year with university credit.

"Our men will come back from service with new and better ideas of sanitation, ventilation, hygiene and general health and it is up to the women of America to prepare themselves to meet the emergency," declared Miss Gannon. University women will be interested in this work and will bear their part of the burden. Every girl in school should hear Miss Gannon at convocation this morning. She is an exceptionally good speaker and has a message for all university young women.
