HUSKERS RETALIATE FOR DRAKE VICTORY

Drop First Game to Bulldogs Friday But Come Back and Win 19 to 9 Saturday

Absence of Three Regulars Explains First Defeat—Freshmen Wallop Doane

The three gapping holes in the Cornhusker lineup neatly plugged with the returned veterans, Schellenberg, Bailey and Gillilan, the Nebraska Cornhuskers regained something of their oldtime form Saturday night and retaliated for their Friday evening defeat at the hands of the Drake Bulldogs by sending them sprawling the full length of a 19 to 9 score.

The first game of the series was plucked by the Iowans by a count of 22 to 15 from the Cornhuskers who were crippled almost beyond recognition. The afore-mentioned regulars, Schellenberg, Bailey and Gillilan, were missing from the score card in the Friday disaster and several substitutes were so new that their tags had not yet been jerked off. Arnold North, freshman forward of two seasons ago, was shoved into the lineup in Schellenberg's place and had only played with the team once since his return from the service.

Reynolds was substituted for Bailey and Ernie Hubka, who withdrew from the squad two weeks ago, was hauled back to play in Gillilan's place.

Teams Battled About Even

The strange mixture worked fairly well in the first half of the game. Drake scored first but Nebraska soon caught up and the score stood 9 to 6 in the Cornhuskers' favor at the half-way point. The Bulldogs came back strong in the last period and tied up the score. The tally balanced about even for a time and within two minutes of the final whistle, the Iowans were leading by a one point margin, 16 to 15. The big lop on the Drake side of the score card was due to three neat baskets from the fingers of Ted Payseur in the last few seconds of play.

The Statistics of the Game

Cornhuskers Avenge Defeat

Revived with the three old-timers again in the lineup, the Husker basket loopers came back Saturday evening and outclassed the visitors to the tune

MEMBERS OF PHI KAPPA

PSI REOPEN NEW HOUSE

With the return of a large number of their men who will re-enter the university for the second semester the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity is reopening its house at 1548 "S" street. Their new home which was built and occupied for the first time last year is one of the newest and most modern designs in fraternity house construction.

At the time the S. A. T. C. was established the house was rented for the remainder of the semester. Although it has been under private direction members of the fraternity have had the use of the house until they formally took it over last week.

True Spirit Is Manifested In Revival of Husker Banquet

With a display of genuine Cornhusker spirit but devoid of any excessive overflow of enthusiasm, the Cornhusker banquet was fittingly revived as one of Nebraska's greatest traditions last Thursday night. More than 150 representative university men were present at the big feast held at the Lincoln Commercial Club to commemorate the deeds of athletic heroes, to give recognition to all university activities, and to pay tribute to the Cornhuskers who fought and died on the battlefields of France.

The banquet this year was conducted with unusually good order. The spirit was there but it had a deeper, truer ring and it manifested itself in hearty applause and in the evidence of keen enjoyment rather than in rowdyism. And when Dr. E. J. Stewart, at the close of his talk, declared that the University of Nebraska could have made no finer sacrifice than "Dusty" Rhodes, all heads were bowed in a silent tribute to the great athlete.

The varsity quartet, Gayles Musical Merry-Makers, and several clever skits provided entertainment while the banquet was in progress. The merriment reached its height when a burly policeman attempted to arrest Paul Dobson, captain of next year's football team, and Cable Jackson, the leader of the basketball quintet, and the crowd refused to let them go.

Guy Reed Presides

Guy Reed, '11, acted as toastmaster and following the banquet he called upon football and basketball men and representatives of other student organizations. Dr. George R. Condra opened the fireworks of the evening with a rousing pep-talk in which he urged Nebraska students to learn the history of the university, its colleges, its athletic teams and its men. A thorough knowledge of the university will greatly assist in quickening Cornhusker spirit, he said.

NEW STAFF IS CHOSEN FOR DAILY NEBRASKAN

Six Students Elected by Publication Board to Direct Paper For Present Semester

Today's issue of the Daily Nebraskan appears for the first time under the direction of the new staff members who were elected at the last meeting of the student publication board, Gaylord Davis, '20, was elected editor-in-chief for the second semester. Howard Murfin, '20, will be the new managing editor; Jack Landale, '21, will fill the news editor's position and Ruth Snyder, '20, will serve as associate editor.

No change was made in the business staff. Glenn Gardner, '21, will continue as business manager and Roy Wythers, '21, will again act as assistant business manager.

Gaylord Davis has served on the Daily Nebraskan as managing editor for the past semester and prior to that time acted as news editor. The new managing editor, Howard Murfin, was news editor last semester. Jack Landale will continue as news editor, a position which he held last semester. Miss Ruth Snyder, the new associate editor, was connected with the staff as society editor last year.

of 19 to 9. Both teams played fairly good basketball and worked every minute of the game. Nebraska surpassed the visitors in the shooting department but Patty really defeated the Bulldogs by his faultless free throwing. The former Omaha star dropped the ball through the loop eight times out of ten attempts and all of them were neat clean throws. Bailey proved the most accurate goal flipper of the fray.

Dr. E. J. Stewart, director of athletics, expressed his pleasure at the return of the Cornhusker banquet as a Nebraska tradition. He told what athletics were doing for the university and made a vigorous appeal for the revival of Cornhusker spirit. His announcement of the football schedule for next year revealed the extension of his policy in drawing big games to Nebraska. He closed with a tribute to "Dusty" Rhodes, the greatest Husker athlete to give his life on the battlefield.

Professor R. E. Cochran, who spoke next, threw a few brickbats at students and activities in general and said that united effort was needed to awaken the university.

Applause at Mention of Gymnasium Regent J. E. Miller was given the heartiest applause of the evening when he said that Nebraska needed a new gymnasium. He reviewed student activities from several different viewpoints and paid a tribute to General Pershing as a Nebraska man. He was followed by Senator R. E. Weaverling, '11, who gave a pleasant review of school life in former days.

"In honor of the real fellows who fought in France," Chancellor Avery appeared in uniform telling of the part the university played in the war. His talk was filled with humor, intermingled with seriousness, as he told stories of camp and army life. He said that real Cornhusker spirit was the embodiment of the fine qualities of the American soldiers who fell in France whom he accorded the highest praise.

Dean C. C. Engberg, in closing the program, appealed for greater efforts in the coming reconstruction period. He deplored the disorganization resulting from the S. A. T. C. and asked that university men unite in doing everything to make the University of Nebraska a bigger and a better institution.

REGISTRATION REVEALS DECREASED ENROLLMENT

Total Figures Show Drop From Preceding Two Semesters' Attendance

A decrease in the number of students enrolled this semester from that of previous semesters is shown by the records of registration up to Saturday evening. This will be surprising to those who expected the campus to be crowded the second half of the year.

The total of 1,691 shows almost 700 less than registered the first semester, and almost 100 less than the second semester of last year. Friday was the heaviest day of the registration, with a total of 492.

The enrollment will be enlarged materially by the registration next week. Many former students who have returned from army service have re-registered in the university.

Bryce Crawford, '22, of Omaha, Calloway Vandecar, '21, of York, and Amos Glinn, '22, of Nebraska City have returned to school for the second semester.

Daily Nebraskan Reporters

The Daily Nebraskan offers an excellent opportunity for university students who wish to secure practical experience in reportorial work. Some experience or ability in writing straight news stories is requisite especially in the case of underclassmen. Students who wish to try out for places on the staff should confer with the managing editor at the Daily Nebraskan office from four to six daily.

DAILY NEBRASKAN STARTS DRIVE FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

Campaign for Student Support Begun Registration Week Will Be Extensively Conducted

One of the most vigorous and far-reaching subscription campaigns ever attempted by a student publication is being conducted by the management of the Daily Nebraskan this week. Business Manager Glenn Gardner, who was hindered by a late start in the registration week drive, will push the campaign harder than ever in an attempt to make a thorough canvass of the entire student body.

Solicitors will continue their work this week and subscriptions will be taken at the student activities' office in the Administration building and at the Daily Nebraskan office in the basement of U. hall. It is hoped that by the end of the week every student and faculty member of the university will have given his dollar in support of the college daily.

Subscription List Low

University publications in general have experienced unusual financial difficulties this year. Advertising has been hard to get and the subscription list has fallen far below normal. During the S. A. T. C. period the paper was distributed to all students and this policy was continued throughout the semester. Next semester a list of subscribers will be posted and the papers checked out at Station "A" where they are delivered at ten o'clock each morning.

Faculty members have shown a commendable spirit in subscribing for the Daily Nebraskan and if students were as whole-hearted in their support the paper would show close to a one hundred per cent subscription list. Solicitors will attempt to meet every faculty member whom they may have missed last week. The Nebraskan will be delivered at the office of any instructor.

CONSERVATION DEPT. IS ENGAGED IN BROAD WORK

The state conservation and soil survey published its preliminary report on the potash industry about a year ago. Since that time several thousand copies of this report have been distributed throughout the United States and other countries.

This department has just completed a bulletin on Nebraska Soils as Road Materials. The bulletin is intended for use by county commissioners and road builders generally.

The final report on the potash industry of Nebraska is being prepared, and the volume will be one of two hundred pages or more. It will contain about fifty descriptive illustrations.

The department of conservation and soil survey is one of the departments at the university which touches a large number of resources and activities of the state. According to statutes this department covers the surveys of soil, lands, road materials, water resources, water power, potash, forest resources and industries. The survey employs a number of advanced students and graduates of the university. Most of the field work is done in co-operation with federal departments. The remodeling of Nebraska hall will aid greatly this department in its work, because it will have a number of laboratories for advanced instruction and to carry on the work of testing road materials, waters, potash, etc. Even special rooms will be used for motography relating to the field work of the survey. The average student does not realize the scope of this department's work and the number of individuals its literature reaches.

Advanced commercial geography will be known the second semester as Economics 4. Beginning with page 640 the text will be completed, but more attention will be paid to outside preparation, magazine articles, and news.

UNIVERSITY PURCHASES BARRACKS AT STATE FARM

The army barrack buildings, completed on the university farm campus shortly before the signing of the armistice, have been purchased by the University of Nebraska. The buildings will be torn down and the lumber and fixtures used or sold.

The barracks consists of four buildings—two sleeping quarters 70 by 150 feet, each, a mess hall 50 by 130 feet, and a toilet and bath house 30 by 100 feet. Three of the buildings are two stories. They contain several hundred thousand feet of lumber, nearly a thousand windows, besides a large quantity of plumbing, toilet and electric light fixtures.

The amount the university paid for the buildings was not announced. Neither was the cost of the buildings to the government ever announced. It is understood the university paid a rather low figure, but the cost of unbuilding the structures will be large.
