PROFESSOR FOGG RETURNS
AFTER ABSENCE OVERSEAS

Nebraska's Journalism Instructor
Back From War
Service.

Was Head of College of Journalism in A. E. F. University in France.

After an absence of eight months from the University of Nebraska, Professor M. M. Fogg has returned to resume his classes in journalism. Professor Fogg was with the A. E. F. University during its entire life of three months, as head of the college of journalism, also professor of English in the college of letters.

The college of journalism boasted of 550 students and a faculty of 17. Fifty of the students had been newspaper men who had had actual experience from both city and country papers, before joining the army. Several of the faculty members had been city editors of leading newspapers in the United States. Seven courses were offered in the college.

"I found the men immensely interested in the work," Professor Fogg said. "They were eager to write of their war experiences. For this reason the course in short story writing was popular."

Professor Fogg was selected a member of the army educational corps by the army educational committee. He was decorated with the Palmes Academique, which is a double silver palm hung on a purple ribbon, by the French government in the person of the minister of public industry and of fine arts. The ceremony was very impressive Mr. Fogg said. The Palmes Academique, established by Napoleon, is an academic distinction given to heads of colleges, and persons who have attained distinction in science or letters. It is very rarely given to foreigners.

Professor Fogg will this year conduct classes in news writing, news editing and the history of journalism, and many students are looking forward to their work under him especially because of his army experience.

NEW PROFESSORS READY FOR WORK

Recent Appointees of Board of Regents Arrive for Years
Instruction.

Department of Engineering Has Many New Faces—Men of High Records.

New professors recently appointed by the regents of the university have arrived in Lincoln and are ready to begin their work for the year. Professors L. H. Warsaw, C. F. Green, and H. L. Vaughan of the modern language department are among the new arrivals.

Raymond E. Davis, assistant professor of civil engineering in charge of surveying, will be a new member of the engineering faculty. He is a graduate of the universities of Maine and Illinois with the degrees of B. S. in railway engineering, C. E. and M. E. Professor Davis has had practical experience as topographic, civil, valuation, and construction engineer. For six and one half years he was instructor in civil engineering at the University of Illinois, and is the author of several manuals and bulletins in connection with his life work.

Professor Davis is a member of the American society of civil engineers, American association of engineers, Illinois society of engineers, society of promotion of engineering education, honorary member of civil engineers clubs at the University of Illinois, and member of the Union League club of San Francisco. During the war Professor Davis had the rank of first lieutenant with several important special commissions to his credit. He comes from the educational service, Leterman General hospital, San Francisco, as head of the vocational department.

Two men have been added to the faculty in the physical education department. They are H. H. Marvin, who will be professor of theoretical physics, and T. Townsend Smith, professor of physics. Professor Marvin has the degree of B. A. from Grinnell. One of his professors at Columbia College, Ia., and Ph. D. from Columbia College, Ia., and Ph. D. from Columbia College, Ia. writes that Professor Marvin was the best student of theoretical physics that ever attended Columbia. He will have the general courses in electrical measurements. Professor Smith was given all three academic degrees at Harvard. He comes from the faculty of the University of Kansas. It will probably have the course in physics for arts and science students and the course in industrial optics.

university this fall, one on social psychology and the other on the biography of American statesmanship. He will also have a graduate seminar, which will deal with the reconstruction problems, the most pressing of which he considers to be the settling of the labor problem and putting an end to industrial warfare. This last he thinks can be done by calling a congress of experts as in a constitutional convention and letting them thresh it out.

PROF. FLING RESUMES DUTIES AT UNIVERSITY

the war in three volumes—first, how we got into war; second, the period of international relations up to the armistice, and third, the peace conference.

Dr. Fling was assisted by five men who gave their entire time from May until December gathering material for volume 1. He was then ordered abroad with a lieutenant assistant when the commission was sent to the conference at Paris. His time and that of his assistants was entirely given to following the operations of the conference. He also kept in touch with conditions in England, France, Italy and Russia.

The party arrived again in Washington on July 5th, and Professor Fling then spent his time following the debates in the senate and hearings before the committee on foreign affairs. The armistice paralyzed his work on the historical branch and all officers who had come from civil life were returned in September. His history of the war was almost completed when he was recalled to the university and material for the third volume had already been organized.

EDUCATIONAL EXPERT HERE
Professor Lida B. Earhart is Highest Paid Woman Instructor
in State

Dr. Lida B. Earhart, professor of elementary education in the teachers' college of the state university, is expected to arrive from the east Wednesday morning to begin her work in Nebraska. She is a woman who can boast that she draws as large a salary as a man, being paid the highest wage of any woman in the state, who is engaged in pedagogical service.

She will at once be found in her office in the new teachers' building, though she may be called away for a day or two to attend a teachers' institute in Nebraska, which she has been invited to address. She comes straight through from New York city where she opened the fall term of the large ward school of which she has been principal, preparatory to turning it over to her successor.

CONTINUOUS AUTO COURSES

Four Weeks' Terms Start Each Monday, Sturdy Autos, Tractors and Trucks

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 17.—Persons wishing to study automobiles, tractors, or trucks may enter the university any Monday this fall and winter, according to an announcement of the agricultural engineering department. Four weeks' courses will be given continuously for six months, beginning September 29. The starting of new classes each Monday will enable farmers and others to take the work as they find time thru the fall and winter. Several four weeks' terms in automobiles, tractors, and trucks given last winter were highly popular and drew students from all over Nebraska and from several other states. The last course, given in May, to provide tractor operators for road work, had an enrollment of eighty-five.
