ABOUT THE CAMPUS

All right Freshman, cheer up, the W. O. T. G. (wearing of the green) will begin tomorrow morning. After a week of waiting, a new supply of freshman caps has come and they will be on sale at the Armory tomorrow noon after the freshman initiation at the Armory. The new caps, like the first supply, will be out of green flannel with a long visor and '23 in white letters on the front. Take advantage of this new stock and get a cap while there is an opportunity.

Miss Constance Rummons has accepted a position as instructor in mathematics at the University of Nebraska. She has given up her fellowship in philosophy at Chicago University. Miss Rummons was graduated from this university three years ago, since which time she has taught at Doane College and assisted in the psychology department at the university.

This column is supposed to contain things about the campus, but what we are going to say is really "above the campus." Miss Jean Hudson, '20, was a passenger in the airplane piloted by Lieutenant Bahl, which flew over the campus Tuesday morning.

The W. S. G. A. board met at noon Wednesday in the Temple. At that time it was decided to begin a drive for membership in the W. S. G. A. on October 6. Ruth Lindsay and Helen Fischer will be the leaders in the campaign, their helpers to be announced later. A party for all freshman girls to be given by the W. S. G. A. Saturday, October 4, at 2:30, assisted by the Y. W. C. A., was arranged for. This party will give the new girls a real chance to become acquainted with each other as well as with upper classmen, an opportunity to get together to have a good time. A program, in which talented university girls will appear, will be given in the Temple theater, followed by an informal good time at Art Hall. Refreshments will be served and dancing will be a feature of the occasion.

"SUNSHINE GIRL" OPENS S. A. DRIVE

The University campaign will be on Friday. Every student will be canvassed. Each student will be given a chance to help in putting the drive "over the top."

FRIENDS

It does seem good to get back to school again and meet all your old friends, and meet new ones doesn't it? And while you are making friends, why not include the teachers?

They will be friends if you will allow them to. What's more they will be some of the best friends you have if you will only go half way. We heard a good definition of a friend the other day. "A friend, (it said) is someone who has traveled the road before you and who guides you in your journey." Teachers just about live up to this definition.

If the lesson is hard, and you are feeling "down and out" go in and see them. Nine times out of ten they can help you. Try it, friends. Teachers are human, even if general comment says otherwise.

Try it and before long you will count them among your best friends in L. H. S.

THE DOUGHBOY'S SENSE OF HUMOR

Edward Streeter in his significant preface to SAME OLD BILL, EH MABLE, the new volume of Bill's letters to Mable, written from France, hints at the real reason why the doughboy's sense of humor did not fail even in the face of such an experience as the World War.

"Not for one moment has there been any thought of making light of that splendid, almost foolhardy, bravery which has characterized the American soldier. It was he himself who made light of it, as he did of the whole war, and probably would of doomsday.

"Nor is there anything unkind or deprecating in his attitude toward the Frenchman. He met a race so distinct from his in ideals and customs that there was no basis for understanding. Failing to understand, he followed his usual rule in such instances and laughed. This is not a treatise on International Relations. It is not a chronology of battles. It is not a memorial of brave deeds. It is merely a few impressions of Pvt. William Smith, Buck, placed in a situation so new, so incomparable, that it had wiser men than he guessing. He was one of those who left their reasons for being 'there' to be analyzed by men not so occupied in the business of keeping alive. He would have been bored to death if you had tried to explain them to him anyway. His loyalty and patriotism were so unquestioned that its discussion was absurd. Sentimental, yet so sensitive to obvious sentimentality that he died many times making fun of the things that he was dying for."

Clemenceau, Premier and Novelist Georges Clemenceau, "Tiger" of France, will make his bow to America as a novelist on September 27th, when Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish the first English translation of his novel, "The Strongest" (Les Pius Forts).

Although above all a gripping story of very human men and women, this book is also a study of the soul of modern France, a dramatization of the conflicts in French life which reached their climax in the French part of the war and the Peace of Versailles.

A Message to University Girls

None appreciate more than Magee's the opportunity we have to serve University girls. It's an education for us (as well as for you), for none are quicker to see smart style and skillful tailoring.

We have developed here a highly specialized department for just such ladies as you—it's located on the third floor, separate and distinct from our men's departments—and it's a department which is second to none in beauty and convenient arrangement.

Our endeavor is to provide a class of highly tailored apparel that will "win a home" in the thoughts of the University girls just as our men's departments have with the University men.

Make this your first stop on your next shopping tour, and you'll be favorably impressed with the fine tailored garments as well as the prompt courteous service.
