IOWANS DECLARE THEY WILL WIN
ly should begin to think how they will get back into grace. The coaches are becoming exasperated at the laziness exhibited by some of the first year men. Three absences unexcused from practice and the guilty freshman will be asked to turn his suit in.
There have been eighty-five suits issued to freshmen gridiron aspirants, the coaches report, and the largest number that have ever turned out on a single day has been in the neighborhood of thirty-five. The suit supply has been exhausted and there are men who want to get into the crumpled suits who have no suits. The first year men are being sized up by the coaches and the cutting down process will soon be begun. Freshman coaches Cameron and Riddell announced Tuesday evening after practice that they were beginning to see what men they were going to use on the team which will make the trips out in the state.
The University Cadet Band will go to Iowa with the team. The organization will pay its own expenses.

"Well, James, how are you feeling today?" asked a minister of a gouty parishioner. "I'm a bit upset, sir," said the old man, sadly. "I've been unfortunate today." "In what way?" queried the cleric. "Well, sir," was the reply, "I got a letter frae a lawyer this mornin' tellin' me that ma cousin Jock had died, an' that he had left me two hundred pound." "Two hundred pounds..." repeated the minister. "And you call that hard luck? Why, it is quite a fortunate..." "Aye," returned the old man, sorrowfully, "but the lawyer didn't put enough stamps on his letter, and I had to pay extra postage."

The head of one house where war conditions had left the place helpless drove his daughter to a party. The head of the house where the party was held was perforce acting as his own carriage man and door-opener. Afterward, when they were formally presented, one said: "I certainly must beg your pardon for something, sir." "What is it?" "You know that night when you drove your daughter to my daughter's party?" "Yes." "Well, when I came to open the door I thought you were your chauffeur." "Cheer up... I thought you were your butler."

ELSIE FERGUSON IN "THE AVALANCHE"
Gertrude Atherton's popular mystery novel of San Francisco society, THE AVALANCHE (Stokes) is being further popularized by its production in motion pictures by the Lasky-Famous Players Corporation. Miss Elsie Ferguson plays the role of Helene Ruyles, the lovely young heroine. The play, like the novel, holds the spectator spellbound from start to finish.

SCHOOL SECURES MORE LANGUAGE PROFESSORS

Nebraska professor has spent two full years and nine summers in romance countries. He has during his period of instruction, taught French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, German and Provençal. He has written many works, and several books, among them "El Trovador," "Los Mos Heramos," and a monograph on Italian dialects.
Jacob Warshaw, another new professor, was born in London, December 22, 1878. He received his A. B. degree at Harvard in 1900, and his A. M. degree two years later at the University of North Carolina. The same year he received a certificate from the University of Paris. In 1912 he received his Ph. D. at the University of Missouri. From 1900 to 1902 he was instructor of modern languages at the University of North Carolina. He taught in Porto Rico in 1904 and until 1907 was district superintendent of Porto Rico, and then was elected to the position of principle of the Central High School of San Juan. In 1908 he was assistant editor of the Porto Rican Review, and congressional secretary of the playground association of America. From 1909 to 1912 he was instructor in romance languages, from 1912 to 1917 assistant professor, and since 1917 has been an associate professor at the University of Missouri. Professor Warshaw is a member of the American Modern Language Association, The Missouri Society of Teachers of Modern Languages and Phi Beta Kappa. He is the author of a Spanish-American composition book, editor of Albes Via Jandro por Sud America, and has contributed many articles and verses to a large number of prominent American periodicals.

Miss Magdalene Craft of Tecumseh is a new instructor in the English department. She received her A. B. degree at the University of Nebraska in 1916 and her A. M. degree the following year. In 1917 she enrolled in the school of journalism at Columbia University, but left her work in the middle of the year to become the head of the department of English in Columbia school at South Orange, N. J. Prior to her entrance into the University of Nebraska she taught in various high schools thruout the state and last year was an instructor of English in the Rawlins Polytechnic School of Rawlins, Wyo.

C. E. Green, a graduate of the Indiana State Normal School, at Terre Haute, is another valuable acquisition to the modern language department at the university. He received his A. B. and A. M. degrees at Syracuse University and expects to receive his Ph. D. in 1920 at the same university. He has the Sigma Iota gold medal for work in Spanish, which was awarded to him in 1916. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and successfully conducted the Spanish Club at Syracuse University for three years. He has been always intimately associated with the Latin-American students, and studied Spanish exclusively one summer term with Dr. Alverto Nin-Frias of Uruguay. Professor Green taught Spanish at Syracuse, and in the University of Pennsylvania in the absence of Romero Navarro, who was in Spain in the service of the government. Professor Green taught Spanish in the University of Pittsburgh from June 30th until August 23d this summer. He received numerous invitations from colleges over the country to become one of their faculty this fall, and he chose Nebraska.

The little boy scout was troubled at night because he had forgotten to do the daily good turn to which all scouts are pledged. Tossing on his bed of remorse, at last he gained inspiration by hearing pitiable noises made by an unfortunate mouse which had been caught alive in a trap in a passage hard by. Mindful of the law, "A scout is the friend of animals," he arose from his bed and took the poor mouse out of the trap. "And what did you do with it?" he was invited to explain, as he told the story of his good turn. "Gave it to the cat," quoth he.

A Smoke to Every Six Pages

A correspondent to Doubleday, Page & Co., wants to know what is going to happen to Christopher Morley as an author if the incipient agitation against tobacco keeps on. In Mr. Morley's latest novel, "The Haunted Bookshop," there are, this gentleman writes, no less than thirty pipes filled and ignited. Cigarettes are not greatly favored by Mr. Morley, but at least two are smoked in "The Haunted Bookshop," while there are twelve references made to characters standing in "clouds of tobacco smoke" or similarly surrounded with the evidences of smoking. This makes a grand total of forty-eight nicotine references, which, since the book is 288 pages long, means that the reader finds one smoke to every six pages. The same correspondent suggests that, since J. M. Barrie first appeared in the field of letters, no writer has introduced smoking into his pages with quite the same gusto as has Mr. Morley in this latest book.

A slow and steady drift has been noticed in the semi-solid material of Trinidad's great asphalt lake. A recent attempt at sounding was stopped without reaching bottom, at 150 feet and in the six weeks of boring the surface had shifted 25 feet. The drifting extended at least 100 feet downward with a counter movement between 25 and 50 feet.

The boys were coming home and Slushton was determined to give them a great reception and not to be outdone by any other of the near-by towns, so everybody hung out decorations. "What's the matter?" asked the vicar of a khaki hero who wept with joy. The man pointed to the local police station on which was displayed a huge banner reading: "Welcome back Again."
