Announcement is made that the Prudential committee of Yale University has elected Professor Albert Feuillierat, of the University of Rennes, France, visiting professor at Yale for the coming year.

It was also announced that a gift of $25,000 has been received from Mrs. John C. Fennell of Kansas City, to establish a fund in memory of her son Charles B. Fennell, a Sheffield graduate in the class of 1911. Other gifts reported include a bird collection from Dr. George Hawley and Samuel Hawley of Bridgeport.

To obtain a new aid for the Yale song "Bright College Years," which is now sung to "The Watch on the Rhine," the class of 1899, through Murray Dodge, its secretary, has offered $1,000 as a prize. The prudential committee of the corporation received the notice and selection of a tune is to rest with the alumni advisory board.

hardly moving. At the end of such a strenuous half day's work she would arise and remark, "I have had such a pleasant time this morning. I have enjoyed this so much."

Miss Loomis prepared a thesis for the master's degree of the Procedure du Chatelet, the criminal court in Paris in 1789. The city government of Paris had demanded an investigation and trials were held when hundreds appeared. Miss Loomis worked slowly and most perseveringly, weighing all the evidence with circumspect care. Then circumstances intervened which made it necessary for her to lay the thesis on the shelf. Later she was persuaded to return to finish the task she had so admirably begun. She worked unremittently until they had to beg her to be easier with herself.

Record at 74
"Then," said the professor in the conference as he leaned back in his chair and the two alumni of his audience listened with tears in their eyes at the courageous record of one of their own. "Then when the examination day arrived she came to it like a great lady from one of the learned salons of the brilliant France of old. She was a duchess, perfect mistress of herself and she passed an admirable examination. She was then about seventy-four years of age."

"She was an inspiration," continued the professor, "in the way she thought of others. She did not teach for money but she had a personal interest in every boy and girl. Think of her paying her way to her seventy-fifth year and studying all this time."

A friend who knew her very well through all the years Miss Loomis spent in Nebraska tells that she began work at the university back in '86 when she carried courses in such subjects as would enable her to be a better teacher. She was in her sixties when she received the degree of A. B. at the university. Such an end had been her ambition since childhood. All her life she clung to her ideal for learning and kept up her effort until it was realized. This effort was the more commendable on her part for the sacrifices it entailed. When she was in her early forties she had business reverses and found it necessary to start again without anything and not only sustain herself but care for others.

"Ever since I can remember," says her friend, "she showed respect and even reverence for learning. This was a dominant trait in her and was second only to her love for her church. To her it seemed that a scholar could do no wrong. She took the greatest pride in her thesis. The keenest pleasure of her late years was her work digging into the facts about the French revolution. This study was her joy."—From the Lincoln Star.

Better understanding and care of lenses would undoubtedly increase their effectiveness. The British Journal of Photography points out that so called "optical" glass is varied greatly in its qualities to adapt it for the many kinds of lenses, and while some glass is as hard and impermeable as other kinds are soft enough to be that used for windows and table ware easily scratched or even dented, and may be quickly dimmed by injury to their exquisite surface. Some of the early anastigmats were very soft and easily corroded because other glass was not available. Some glasses are so susceptible to damp that a single drop of water left on the surface a few hours will leave a permanent mark and a film of moisture will give rise to general corrosion, showing prismatic colors in mild cases and a permanent yellow stain in severe ones. Even the naked of the lens may not be able to restore the glass to its original accuracy. Prevention is the only safeguard, and tight fitting caps should protect the glass when not in use.

KATHLEEN NORRIS'S GREATEST BOOK

On September 27th Doubleday, Page & Co. will bring out "Sisters," a novel by Kathleen Norris. The California which Mrs. Norris knows so well furnishes the setting, the unfolding lives of two of the most appealing girls in recent fiction, the theme. In tracing the doubts, the impulses, the dreams, the heartaches, the development of these two sharply contrasted characters, Mrs. Norris has, according to one of those best acquainted with her work, reached those depths of insight and understanding which make for real greatness. This critic has said: "It is without doubt Mrs. Norris's greatest book."

Who was it spread the gospel
that "Knowledge is power?"

He said a bookfull of facts. Knowledge is power, and your daily newspaper is a sort of power plant out of which you draw knowledge of lots of things—clothes, for instance. The more knowledge you gather about clothes the better qualified you are to buy prudently and economically. We believe that if all men carefully studied the clothes question instead of buying haphazard on price alone, as many do, it would be impossible to supply the demand for
