

GROUND IS CLEARING FOR LARGER CAMPUS

Students who have waded thru mud and water for nearly two years are thankful that the new walks on the north side of the new Social Science and Teachers College buildings are now completed. The grounds of these new structures are being leveled and rolled and will soon present the appearance of belonging to the campus at the university, which in fact they do.

Since the campus extension movement, the east end of the University of Nebraska city campus faces on 14th street, where stands the new Teachers Training School. The ground north of the newly laid walks as far as Bessey Hall is also included in the new campus, and that south of the new buildings to the Temple is being rapidly cleared.

Houses are being moved, torn down, and wrecked in various numbers to make what was a university eye-sore for many years, a stretch of beautified campus. As many as twelve dwellings have already been removed, and the population of this neighborhood already have evacuated their places of abode. Where unsightly clothes-lines, barns, piles of rubbish, outhouses and what not, formerly bedecked a smooth expanse of ground, dotted with trees, the new university campus will arise. This proposed extension will make Nebraskas campus one of the largest in this country, and when the grass and flowers begin to bloom, one of the most picturesque college grounds.

Many eastern professors visiting at Nebraska, who have walked under the elms at Yale and studied on the benches at Princeton, and Harvard, have said that Nebraska's present campus is one of the most beautiful in the United States—"beautiful because it is natural," they add.

SCARLET AND CREAM GRIDIRON YEARNINGS SOAR WHEN HUSKERS STOP "MINNIE"

How about the utterance of one of the halfbacks just before boarding the train Thursday quoted in The Daily Nebraskan Friday as follows: "We'de going to hit those Gophers with a zip."

The fulfillment of this Husker's prophesy was confirmed in the following telegraphic flash from Northrup field as the first quarter ended: "Displaying a calibre of football characteristic of the Stiehm-roller of old, Nebraska went at Minnesota in today's memorable battle with a punch that spelled victory. Only because of a luckless fumble on their own 40 yard line and a bit of Gopher luck did the northern team score. The score came at the close of the first half."

"SCHELLEY" DID IT
"Schellenberg will not be able to play Saturday," said Coach Schulte before leaving for Minnesota. Evidently he did not reckon on this fighting halfback correctly. Sitting on the sidelines through three quarters, his team mates rushing the ball almost repeatedly over the mark, and with the Maroon and Gold still flying six points above the Scarlet and Cream, proved a more effective tonic for sore ankles than the coach had yet found.

"Schelly's run was the sweetest play of the game," said Coach Schulte on his return to Lincoln. "Every man put an extra 50 per cent of energy and co-operation into putting that dash over. There was perfect co-ordination between every part of the machine on that drive. It was one of those plays over which a coach can say: 'Just right.'"

"Yes," he replied "I thought so," she said, "your face is the roughest I ever—" Then she stopped, but it was too late, and he went away with a lump in his throat.
