A TEST OF STUDENT INTERESTS

Are student at the University of Nebraska too busy to pay any attention to university life in general outside the realm of their own particular activities? Are they too much concerned with what they are trying to do to concern themselves with problems of universal interest to students?

The meetings which have been announced for the present week will be a test of student spirit in this regard. They have been arranged for the purpose of presenting great problems and getting the student interested in some of the basic principles which underly university life.

The meetings are not conducted by the young men's and young women's Christian associations on the campus although they receive their support. They are all-university discussions on all-university questions. The addresses which Mr. Wilson will give concern more than spiritual welfare. They deal with social and industrial problems as applied to the university and to the outside world. The theme in general will be "Constructive Christian Democracy," a tonic which the college world needs to cure its indifference at the present time.

HITTING ON ALL TWELVE

Did you ever ride 40 miles an hour in a Ford, and then fly along at the same speed in one of the high-priced 12-cylinder cars? If you have only been an observer of the progress of these machines, you will at least grasp the comparison.

Daily a similar comparison may be witnessed at the University, as some of the students may be seen scurrying across the campus, while others sail serenely along toward their destination. Both get there at the same time, but the scurrying ones seem to require so much more effort. They not only expend much unnecessary energy in getting any place, but they continue to talk about their need for hurry before they start and after they arrive, until the casual or bored listener wonders why they don't hire a taxi and save effort.

As a rule, the student who walks, not lazily, but in a purposeful way, is the one that has the greater amount of business to attend to. He gets there just as easily as does the 12-cylinder car, and can draw a larger load.

So many students can put themselves in the 12-cylinder class by refusing to get excited over the duties to which they must attend and by taking calmly the seeming uproar that prevails in the world. Three weeks of the school year have elapsed and the rush and excitement still continues. It is up to the individual students to settle down to their work in a quiet and undisturbed manner, for they go to make up a university of 12-cylinder accomplishments.

SUPPORT NEBRASKA COMIC MAGAZINE

How many students realize that the University of Nebraska publishes a monthly comic magazine which ranks with the best in the country? And yet Awgwan has a subscription list that numbers in the hundreds. University students to the last one should subscribe to this publication and thereby show their appreciation for it.

Nebraska's comic has been quoted in "Topics of the Day" in news films the country over, and yet the students of the school where it is published don't think it worthy of their support to the extent of the price of a subscription. National newspaper syndicates also use paragraphs from Awgwan.

Awgwan is of national prominence. It can stand comparison with comic magazines which have subscription lists of tens and hundreds of thousands. The humor, the art, the cover designs, and every other feature of the magazine are excellent work.

Why, then is it that a student considers he is doing his part if he is satisfied with reading Awgwan over another's shoulder. It is time the students were awake to the good things of their school. Everyone subscribe and bring the subscription list of Awgwan into the thousands.

WILSON AND CONSTRUCTIVE DEMOCRACY

Democracy is the goal of the ages. The blood of 10,000,000 soldiers who died on the battlefields of Europe, and the burden laid upon future generations of a debt of $450,000,000,000 are the result of efforts to make the past gains of democracy secure. These are some of the thoughts brought out in the course of lectures known as "Constructive Christian Democracy of the World" which will be given by J. Stitt Wilson this week for university students. The first lecture of this series will be given Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock in the Armory. The second will be given at a special convocation in the Temple Wednesday morning at the same hour, the subject of which is "The Very Soul of Democracy." "The Supreme Virtue of Democracy" will be given at the Temple Thursday evening at seven thirty o'clock.

Nebraska is fortunate in having secured this man for his institute, or series of lectures. He is being sought by prominent men from all parts of the country. He has been urged to cancel his Nebraska engagement in order to lecture on the League of Nations. Always in the advance guard in vital problems, he is considered an authority on the solution of labor problems.

A Nebraska student who heard Mr. Wilson recently says of him, "He approaches social and industrial problems from an absolutely different angle. Every one who intend to employ men, lead men or influence men should hear him. He is simply great."

GLIMPSE OF A BIG MAN

Always Gompers has tried to steer a middle course, and it has not been easy, says a writer in Forbes Magazine. I recall one night when the head of the carpenters union had defied the shipyards. It was just at the time when the German tide was rolling across France, and American ships were needed to carry American soldiers overseas. Gompers had rushed into the breach to check his unruly subordinates. It had been a day of conferences and meetings, of hot words and rash threats. It was late at night when the last meeting broke up, and Sam Gompers sank into his office chair completely exhausted. His odd, squat figure showed utter weariness in every line; his sparse hair was ruffled.

The newspaper men who had been holding their vigil in the hallway gathered round the labor leader to know whether he had brought his insurgent union president to order.

"It's going to come out all right," he said. "I'm too tired to talk, but go easy on your stories, and remember, if you should indicate that I am taking any one side in this argument that you are destroying utterly any usefulness I may have."

Your Measure

During the four years in which a student resides at the university, he creates certain impressions among his fellow-classmates, as well as among his instructors and professors, a permanent record of which is filed in the office of the registrar upon the graduation of each student. Each department of the institution thus places on permanent record just what kind of a man or woman the student has developed into by the time he has obtained his degree. Business men and industrial concerns apply by hundreds each year at the registrar's office for information regarding the personality, habits, industry, accuracy, self-reliance and other important knowledge which any important business organization endeavors to obtain about a college graduate whom they are going to employ, and it is these records which supply the information.

In many ways this is unfair to the student, because he is simply rated by his instructor or professor at the time when he has nearly completed a course under the particular instructor and has no opportunity of knowing just how he appears in the estimate of himself as filed by the particular department. If this system were arranged so that each student was rated by the faculty members of his own school during the middle of his junior year, and given a personal interview after such an estimate had been made by one of the faculty who had assisted in the rating, the student would have a chance to profit by a knowledge of the defects in his make-up as they appear to others, who are qualified to judge in such matters. Hence, he would have the opportunity to overcome these defects, or at least to improve himself, and, indirectly to increase his earning power after he gets into the business world.—Purdue Exponent.
