For twenty-five years Popkin had been married, and during that time Mr. Popkin's tongue had wagged almost incessantly. But one fine day she sat for fully five minutes reading a paper. And Popkin was happy. "My dear," broke in his better half, just when he had begun to enjoy the change and reflect on what he'd missed in the past. "I see by the papers that a petrified jaw, two yards long, has just been found in Cornwall." "What!" Popkin cried, starting up suddenly from his chair. "Ah, now I know the secret of your past. I know all! But you never told me before that your ancestors came from that part of the world!"
