A DEFICIT MET
The goose whose eggs of gold were made was slain. The tale our hearts must touch. But, luckily, the hen has laid a lot of eggs worth 'most as much. —Washington Star.

SHAKESPEARE'S WILL

We are indebted to an English publication for a copy of the last will and testament of the late William Shakespeare. In the course of this document we observe the following sentence:

"I gyve onto my wief my second best bed with the furniture."

We have no desire to flatter ourself. We have no desire to find fault with the successful poet and dramatist of Stratford for this apparent discrimination against the Widow Shakespeare. What disposition he made of his first best bed is a matter that is not revealed by the copy of the will of the versatile author whose last testament is reported in the columns of our alert London contemporary. However, we don't think Mr. S. showed just the right spirit in gyveing onto his wief his second best bed. O why did he not gyve onto her his grst bed, or his tee pottle, or his punche bole with the gilt butterflyes, or his favorite wigge, or his safety razor, or fountain penne, or bicycle—anything in fact, but his second best bed.

No doubt Mr. Shakespeare had gone to bed with his boots on many a Saturday night in that very second best bed and yet, hallowed as it was by such memories, one cannot feel such that the widow was treated unfairly. Perhaps Will's folks influenced him. As a co-writer we have only the highest regard and esteem for him. But we don't think he acted right about friend wief.—Thrift Magazine.

An unusually interesting and up-to-date book on an interesting country is THROUGH EGYPT IN WAR TIME, by Martin S. Briggs, an officer of the British Forces in Egypt, who here describes, with vivid narrative gift, his journey over thousand of miles of territory little frequented by Europeans and also his visits to the familiar haunts of the tourist, changed and made empty of gaiety by the war. It is published by Stokes.
