

FORMER HUSKER STAR WITH FAMOUS EASTERN ELFVEN

Guy Chamberlain star football half-back of the Cornhusker, a few years ago, has donned the moleskins again playing on "Jim Thorpe's pro" eleven at Canton, Ohio. The message from Canton states:

"Guy Chamberlain is playing with us—the Canton Bulldogs.

Jim Thorpe.

In the east professional football has been a financial success for fifteen years or more. Canton and Massillon, Ohio, are the centers of professional activity and many of the famous college stars have clashed in Thanksgiving and Christmas days drawing great crowds.

Among the many famous college stars that have played on these teams are Doctor F. J. Stewart who once managed the Massillon team and also played on quarterback on its team. This year's Canton team will have Chamberlain, ex-Cornhusker and Stanley Coffal ex-Notre Dame captain as its halfbacks.

Chamberlain recently obtained his discharge from the U. S. army. During the two years of service with Uncle Sam he won a commission.

Being rated by many expert followers of football east and west, as the greatest end runner in American college circles, it is certain that Cornhusker followers never saw his equal and it was generally agreed all over the Missouri Valley conference that Chamberlain would have been as much of a sensation in eastern circles as he was in the west.

Natural history had been the subject of the day's lesson in school and the teacher asked: "Now who can tell me what an oyster is?" A small hand, gesticulating violently, sot up into the air and a shrill voice called out, "I know—I can tell, teacher." "Well, Bobby," said the teacher, "you may tell us what an oyster is." "An oyster," triumphantly answered Bobby, "is a fish built like a nut."

"The senate has become a joke," said Senator Borah. "It is the laughing stock of the country. Only the other night I heard a young lady say to her father: 'What do you think about my engagement to Harold?' 'I think,' replied the father, 'that I am getting to be the senatorial branch of the family. My advice and consent are considered only when it is too late for them to make any difference.'"

A newspaper reporter who was inclined to be lazy in his method of picking up news, met a brother reporter, who was as keen as the other was lazy. "Anything doing?" asked the lazy one. "I have a report that a man was choked to death in a restaurant, but I haven't learned his name yet," replied the other. "How did it happen?" asked the reporter eagerly scenting copy. "He was eating a piece of horse-meat," was the reply, "and some one said 'Whoa!'"

Frank L. Smith, a seaman, late of Dunkirk, France, recently was returned to his home in Los Angeles and was concerned by reported, "What did you see over there?" demanded the reporter, using the regular formula. "Oh, nothing much. You see, I was in Dunkirk and that was behind the lines." "Dunkirk, eh? Say wasn't that the place the Germans shot up so much?" "I reckon it was." "Well, didn't you get into much action?" "Nope. I spent most of my time in the cellars with the rest of the boys." "Cellars? Was it air raids?" "Yes, we had a few." "How many were you in?" "Sixty-five." "How many bombardments were you in?" "Thirty-five — from the land." "How many from the sea?" "About a dozen." "Anybody get killed in Dunkirk?" "Nearly everybody." "And they didn't hit you?" "No, but they tried every night for ten months. Say, bo, were ain't no use you talking to me. I was in the navy. Ask some of those fellows who were at the front. They'll give you a story. Honest, I didn't see a thing," and with that Frank L. Smith ambled down the street to see what was to be seen.
