One of the things the University needs most is a printing plant. Thousands of dollars are spent with outside plants each year by the school and its publications, money which might well be kept at home and applied to a fund for building and equipping a permanent University printing shop.

Student publications, including the Cornhusker, Awgwan, Daily Nebraska, Blue Print, Agriculture and the Student Directory, the Alumni Journal and others expend large sums with downtown firms. Added to this is money spent for job work, schedules, programs and announcements. The amount of money spent by these publications in one year would be enough to establish a modern and up-to-date printing plant with full equipment. Once established, there is no question that it would be a profitable venture. The university and its organizations could easily supply enough work to keep it busy at a saving in time and cost to themselves. The present high printing rates paid by publications, if turned over to a university plant, could be materially reduced and still make the shop a financial success.

The problem of help would be one of the easiest ones to solve. In fact, this is one of the decided advantages of the system. A printing shop would offer part-time work to scores of university students to whom the chance of earning money in connection with their university work would prove especially attractive.

A printing plant on the university campus would be a great convenience because it would give preference to university work, avoid delays in getting out printed matter and insure better quality of work. It would not be necessary for publications to waste time in transacting their business with outside firms but would put them in touch with an organization which would be in a position to give them better service.

The initial outlay in constructing a plant would not be so large but that the expenditure could be repaid within a few years by the profits of the shop. The installation of such a shop would be in line with the present period of university development and expansion. There is so much to be gained and so little to lose in such a venture that the University authorities could scarcely make a mistake in approving the building of a printing plant for the University of Nebraska.

After viewing the destruction wrought by the aggregation from Ames, Nebraska is quite ready to assent to the request of Iowa State college sport writers and call the Ames players "Cyclones."

A HUMAN FACTORY?

To the average person a University is a place where high school graduates are sent for four years training which shall make them fit for their life-work. It is regarded as a human factory where the student is entered as a freshman and after four years of tempering, comes out of the other end of the chute a finished product post-marked for delivery to the world.

The same view is sometimes held by students who have not learned the big lesson of university training. What this type of students has missed is that the study at the University is at best only a foundation for the study needed after leaving school. The men whose personalities are being forced on the attention of the world are men, who not only went to college, but men who have continued their studies ever since. Roosevelt, whose greatness has been impressed on the public since his death is a notable example of the men who carried their books with them after graduation day. The attitude of mind of every student, whose ambitions are worthy, should be that university training is only the foundation for the constant preparation which will be necessary throughout a useful life.—The Daily Kansan.

GIRLS PLAY SOCCER

GAME TO THE SCORE

A fast game of soccer, resulting in a tie score, was played Friday afternoon on the athletic field by picked teams of upper class girls. Each team made one goal. Both of these goals were made during the first half. The most spectacular play of the game was made by Mary Stephens, captain of the red team, who kicked goal from a difficult angle near the center of the field. The players put on a high class exhibition of soccer.

A large crowd of freshmen and sophomore girls witnessed the game. As soccer was new to many of the spectators Lillian Story gave a brief explanation of the game. The crowd was enthusiastic over it.

The game was under the auspices of the W. A. A. Lillian Story was referee and Miss Clark time keeper.
