IMPRESSIONS OF A REPORTER WRITING A STORY ON TYPEWRITER

Savagely kicking and "talking" to the last bit of almost perfect machinery the irate reporter travels to the last and most dubious looking machine. On this he labors without event for more than half an hour, never once glancing at the copy as the machine runs so perfectly. Finally he discovers that the ribbon to this machine is torn to shreds and only a few syllables here and there tell of a would-be "story" on the fuel situation, which has been developed into a mass of beautiful hieroglyphics of every form and color, beautiful to the eye but not to the mind.

This is the course of a "story" as it leaves the telephone and becomes almost ready for the press—all except the rewriting.

Is it any wonder that reporters hasten to a place where the typewriter demands that the article be written within a reasonable length of time? But such is life on a college daily.

A copy of letter received November 14, 1919 by I. P. A.

"Catholic Alliance of the Cross Austrian Empire Federation Headquarters, Volkshelzentrale, Graz. Honorable Intercollegiate Prohibition Association. United States of America.

The war against alcoholism, which America has brought to victory, is just in its beginnings here.

The Catholic Alliance of the Cross, the largest abstinence society in the Austrian Empire, desire to take advantage of the present moment of family and social suffering to accomplish a great work for temperance.

In view of the fact that the American brother society, which we envy in its success, has taken a mighty step forward through the passage of prohibition laws and hence is much lightened in its burdens, we permit ourselves the hopeful inquiry if your organization cannot come to our assistance. According to the Jews, indeed, the American societies are already carrying the war against alcoholism into Europe. We place ourselves at your command as shock troops. . . . In the hope that we have not asked in vain, we sign with friendly greetings."

HAND GRENADES

THE WOOL STOCKINGS

In addition to the leatherette coats and the other styles this year, comes the wool stockings. Formerly the co-ed never thought of anything but silk where she now treads on wool. The department stores have been rushed for this commodity because if the 8 o'clock is to be made at all it must be thru the wool hose which surround the anklettes thus eliminating the shoes which last year reigned supreme.

Now the "co-ed" can blithely wear her last year's oxfords and thus conserve shoe leather by buying wool stockings at $5.00 and $5.00 a pair. It is to be hoped, however, that the young ladies will be moderate and not buy more than a dozen pairs at a time, which would exhaust the stock and keep some "poor young thing" from protection against winter's wrath.

The old tradition of green stockings doesn't seem to apply to the old maid—(pardon me)—bachelor girl's exclusive wear, for many are the hues and styles acquired. Wool stockings ribbed with red and green stripes to the modest burnt orange and black of the stitched variety it might be suggested that the "co-eds" order the colors to be exclusively scarlet and cream, so that in launching a street car all will know that the young lady belongs to the State University rather than Wesleyan or any other school.

And the half-sock—what a shock to our imaginations! Imagine the sensation of seeing some little damsel's hose slipping, slipping downward and then to remember that she has another pair inside and is just wearing that cunning little roll (patterned after our English brothers)—to the gasping spectators in order to show that she is of the exclusive class, which owns two pairs of hose and wears them both at the same time.

She who hasn't acquired wool stockings passee, so no matter if your old oxfords are worn out get new ones for we must show wool this year!

Stadium for Hanoverians

Dartmouth is to have a stadium in which to play its football, lacrosse and games next year. The Alumni body has decided to donate the stadium which will be known as the Alumni Oval. It is expected to have a seating capacity of 10,000.

Cornell's Swimming Pool

Plans are being made at Cornell University for a swimming pool and the organization of a swimming team. The figures on the cost of the new tank range from $50,000 to $70,000. It is not expected that the new pool will be finished before two years.

BUBBLES

Christmas is a future event but let us think of the present; Therefore we offer the following suggestions:

For the motorist: a scarf, as the law requires them to have a muffler.

For any student: a knife so that they can cut class.

For the music lover: five silver dollars as that would be music to their ears.

For the anti-prohibitionist: a pair of pumps to that they would have something from which to get a drink.

For the man who combs his hair pompadour: a comb, as that would be something they would never part with.

For father: a blanket, as it would be a comfort to him.

For the murdered: a sled, so that he could go sleighing.

For the sailor: a pack of cards, as he is used to a deck.

Lincoln merchants admonish the students to shop early, as the university may close at any time.

Wonder if the aunts and uncles can understand the sudden interest shown in them by their nieces and nephews?

Many fathers fervently wish that Xmas would be postponed a year on account of the coal shortage.
