 For This Issue

Proposition 1. I favor the ratification of the League and Treaty without amendments or reservations.

Proposition 2. I am opposed to the ratification of the League and the Treaty in any form.

Proposition 3. I am in favor of the ratification of the Treaty and the League, but only with the specific reservations as voted by the majority of the Senate.

Proposition 4. I favor any compromise under reservations which will make possible the immediate ratification of the Treaty and the League.

Proposition 5. I favor the Government proceeding to make peace with Germany at once and leaving the question of a League of Nations to be settled afterwards.

Proposition 6. I favor a compromise of the reservations of such a character as will avoid the danger of defeating ratification while still making clear that America can only be involved in war by a declaration of Congress, that domestic questions and the Monroe Doctrine are entirely outside of the jurisdiction of the League, that plural votes of any member are all disqualified in the event of a dispute where in we are disqualified from voting, and that on deciding to withdraw we are to be the judge of whether our obligations have been met.

The propositions concerning the treaty of peace with Germany and the league of nations on which students will be asked to give their opinions next week are here printed. In common with colleges all over the country, the University of Nebraska will register student feeling in regard to this subject by means of an election open to all students and faculty. This will undoubtedly be the largest consensus of undergraduate opinion ever made.

This action should not be regarded as a partisan movement of any sort. The plan was originally conceived by the intercollegiate association of New York City for the purpose of stimulating discussion among the academic circles and for obtaining as accurate as possible expression of college sentiment. The committee in charge is composed of the editors of the Harvard, Columbia, Yale and Princeton publications, who possess different views on the matter. Another evidence of its freedom from politics is the fact that the project is backed by Presidents Hadley of Yale, Butler of Columbia, Lowell of Harvard, and Hibben of Princeton.

On a matter of such vital importance to the nation, the average college student has no doubt formed an opinion. Those who have not should seize this opportunity to inform themselves. Talking with people who have made a study of it, and searching of their own minds after a period of concentration will prove of immense benefit to them. They cannot then fail to have an opinion which is intelligent, and which must then be worth recording by ballot. The plan contemplates a 100 per cent ballot in all of the colleges of the United States. It is to be hoped that all Nebraska students will cast their vote so that it will not appear that Nebraska undergraduates fail to take an interest in national issues.

SUSPICIOUS NATURES

A suspicious habit of mind is usually the attributes of a weak character. The man who is strong, well-balanced and well-equipped for life does not often concern himself with suspicions of the motives or designs of other persons. His own methods are direct, his purposes are clear; he relies on his ability to defeat hostile attacks should they come, but he does not lie awake at night imagining that hostile attacks are being prepared. Because of his unsuspecting habit of mind, he is sometimes temporarily at a disadvantage. On the other hand, the suspicious man is sure to be making enemies for himself, while the unsuspecting man is making friends.

What must be forever the classic example of the suspicious attitude of mind and its consequences has been afforded by Germany. The German people appear sincerely to have suspected that France and England and Russia were hatching a plot to compass their downfall. They were the more ready to suspect it because they were themselves, through their leaders, intriguing to circumvent France and England and Russia. The suspicious person always has a tendency to do things that he suspects others of doing.

What the world needs more than anything else today is confidence. It needs the confidence of the individual man in his own powers, but even more it needs his confidence in the decency, the sincerity, the honesty of his neighbor. Suspicion is today the chief foe to civilization.—Ohio Lantern.
