THE DAILY DITTY
 by
 Gayle Vincent Grubb

On a night when the moon was behind a cloud
 And safety-first kept them from talking out loud,
 A couple were wrapped up in each other's sighs
 On a porch, in a swing, side by side, eyes to eyes.

When sighs were the deepest and each was as still
 As the old village churchyard that lies on the hill,
 And the bats uncoiled wings for a dash in the night
 Came the crash and a scream that has caused me to write.

For the chains, holding swing where the couple was at Parted links at the point where the young couple sat
 And they fell, but arose while the one stole away
 While the other did somewhat the same, so they say.

But what bothers me when the tale has been told
 Of the maid who was shy and the knight who was bold;
 Is the question of who fixed the swing before dawn
 When the He and the She were supposedly gone.

BUCK UP OLD FELLOW
 Buck up old fellow, things aint so dead wrong
 Just because examinations are coming along;
 For if you have done your work as you ought,
 The Professors will appreciate what you have wrought,
 And the sun will shine and the clouds pass by
 When those little old papers are graded sky high.

And what a satisfaction to know that you've won
 In this hard battle which you've just begun;
 To know that you've done the best that you could
 For you'll get your reward with a big "very good"
 So I say, buck up old fellow, things aint so dead wrong
 Just because examinations are coming along.

NOT OBSERVING
 "Gentlemen, you do not use your faculties of observation," said an old professor, addressing his class. Here he pushed forward a pot containing a chemical of exceedingly offensive smell. "When I was a student," he continued, "I used my sense of taste," and with that he put his finger in his mouth. "Taste it, gentlemen, taste it," said the professor, "and exercise your preceptive faculties."
 The pot was pushed toward the reluctant class, one by one. The students resolutely dipped their fingers into the concoction, and, with many a wry face, sucked the abomination from their fingers.
 "Gentlemen, gentlemen," said the professor, "I must repeat that you do not use your faculties of observation, for had you looked more closely you would have seen that the finger which I put in my mouth was not the finger I dipped in the pot."—Ex.
