GIRLS TALK OVER INDUSTRIAL FIELD

(Continued from Page One) forcing the principles for which the Y. W. C. A. stands was brought up. Miss Owers explained the three methods of enforcement: (1) the voluntary action of the employer; (2) the organization of women into unions and (3) legislation. She said that the American women have not displayed much interest in joining unions, because they feel that they are in the industrial field only for a few years before they marry. Miss Owers urged that this should be no cause of indifference; because whenever one woman quits another takes her place, and thus there is a permanent class of women workers; to disregard the group is selfish.

Every girl was brought face to face with her part in the situation by the reminder that women have the ballot, with a few such questions as, "would you rather go (into an industrial establishment she been describing) as an individual or as a member of a union," and by questions about the labor statutes of Nebraska, which brought many to a realization of their ignorance.

Public Opinion Important. Miss Owers stressed the importance of public opinion. Upon this, she said, not only the passage of laws but their enforcement is dependent.

In a brief talk Miss Dunbar told of the unity of the Young Women's Christian Association throughout the world and asked the girls to be thinking of methods of financing the organization, which are to be voted on at the Cleveland conference.

Miss Wygal led the devotional exercises.

The meeting was attended by Cotner students and working girls as well as university students.

Undying Songs

"There are songs," said the musician, "that have never, never died. They go ringing down the ages." "That is true, sir," Brown replied, "For the past six months and upward I have heard my daughter try to kill two or three each evening, but they never, never die"—Ex.
