

HOOSIERS COME NEXT FOR CLASH

better basketball than in any previous game if it hopes to stand even a ghost of a show against Jumbo Sjöhm's Hoosiers. Northwestern had already licked Iowa by a lop-sided score, after which Iowa put it over Chicago, one of the leaders in the Big Ten conference race. Now comes Indiana with a knockout wallop on Northwestern. That Indiana score against the Evans-ton team means that the Hoosiers out-classed Northwestern just as much as Nebraska outclassed South Dakota. There isn't any argument to it. Indiana has been the strongest basketball team that ever contracted to play the Cornhuskers on the Nebraskan floor."

AMERICAN LEGION WILL HOLD DANCE FEBRUARY 13

The University Post of the American Legion will have a dance February 13, at the Commercial Club. Tickets are on sale at Law 208 between 11 and 12 daily.

This dance will be the first of a series to be given by the University Post and can only be attended by members in good standing for 1920. The committee in charge is making elaborate preparations for the dance and expect it to be a success.

PUPILS IN LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL WENT ON STRIKE

Students in the high school at Lincoln voted to strike for shorter assignments in the English classes, but after a conference with their principal decided not to strike.

A class in Spanish struck some time ago and got only half of the Friday's assignment by "collective bargaining."

The next day the teacher gave an examination on the last half of the assignment and the strike was called off.

Sounds like a joke, but it is absolutely true. The virus is being rather well scattered throughout our well known "agricultural" state.

SPORT BRIEFS

The Pacific Coast conference track meet has been scheduled to be held at Palo Alto on May 15. Both the University of Oregon and Stanford wanted the contest and it was finally decided that the meeting will go to Stanford.

Yale and Harvard have decided not to dignify tennis as a major sport, much to the disappointment of the devotees of the game. However, there is a glimmer of hope in the suggested organization of an intercollegiate tennis league, comprising Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, and Pennsylvania. So far as actual interest is concerned, tennis is at present essentially a major sport, and needs only the official sanction of the athletic governors to give it a technical standing equal to its real place in college life.

Coach George Van Santvoord of the Yale crew recently tried the innovation of coaching the crew from an aeroplane. The experiment was novel but it is doubtful if it can be put into practical usage. The aeroplane is much faster than the shell and means of communication are difficult, it being necessary to shout above the noise of the engine. In one way, however, it has a very important use and that is in judging the action of the men. Close up views of the action can be obtained in this way that would be very nearly impossible in any other.

Yale had under consideration a proposal to send their varsity eights to the Henley rowing regatta in England, June 20-July 3 to compete for the Grand Challenge Cup, now held by Harvard, as a result of the victory of the Crimson crew at Henley in 1914. With the annual Yale-Harvard regatta to be held at New London on June 25, however, selection of June 30 as the opening Henley date was said by Harvard rowing authorities to make it doubtful whether either university would be represented. Postponement of the New London regatta is considered impracticable, because the date is governed by commencement and arranged for the benefit of graduates. The possibility of sending a second or special crew will be considered, but decision would not come for some time.
