

ART ASSOCIATION TO GIVE EXHIBITIONS

Two Secondary Showings of Popular Paintings to be Given in May.

The Art Association has made arrangements for two secondary exhibitions. The first of these will be given in May and will be an exhibition of Chinese paintings from the Cleveland art gallery. The second of these exhibitions has not been definitely timed as yet but will be within the current year. It will be a memorial exhibition of paintings by Henry Golden Dearth who died two years ago. Dearth is a painter of great prominence and his paintings have risen phenomenally in price and appreciation.

Effort has been made previous to this to get this exhibition here but the efforts were fruitless as the circuit was limited. Nebraskans are very fortunate to be one of the centers to which this great opportunity has been offered. He has painted in Northern France and Brittany and was particularly fond of mediaeval churches.

Every afternoon at four o'clock, Miss Moore, assistant curator of the Art Gallery, will give informal gallery talks. Tuesday evening in room 310 the official lecture of the American Federation of Art on the history of American painting will be given and repeated again on Thursday and Saturday. These lectures will be profusely illustrated by lantern slides. On Wednesday evening Professor W. F. Dana will speak in the Art Gallery. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings the orchestra will play in the Art Gallery. On Friday evening there will be a reception to the State Press Association and the members of the faculty in the gallery.

PROFESSOR S. B. GASS PUBLISHES NEW VOLUME

Professor S. B. Gass has recently published a volume of essays entitled, "A Lover of the Chair," which is already attracting attention in the literary world.

These essays are the result of work at various times for a number of years. One of the first essays was written for the Yale Review and many of the other essays are in the same vein. The subjects in the book are, treating such subjects as school-day impressions, friendship, love and educational, social and political problems.

Paul E. More, a former editor of the Nation and a well-known literary critic, has published a criticism of Mr. Gass's book in "The Villager." In regard to the latter part of the book, the critic says, "The book closes with an autobiographical fragment which is its best literary feature and has the advantage of bringing the various problems involved to a moral focus."

Commenting upon this, Professor Gass stated that no part of the book is an autobiography. The same character is followed through the entire volume.

The criticism closes with, "Amid a thousand hustling and professionally hopeful books on education and politics this one, with its quiet and whimsical seriousness, is rather likely to be overlooked. To overlook it, however, is a serious reader's loss."

Nine alumni of the university of Nebraska met at Portland, Ore., on the third of the present month. Mr. Harry who was connected with the university in 1885 was present. He is a physician and is temporarily in Portland, recuperating from a severe stititious ones call his bluff?

THE following is an excerpt from a statement issued at the conclusion of a recent conference at the Department of Justice in Washington presided over by Assistant District Attorney Figg and participated in by manufacturers, retailers and labor interests:

"The public must be advised that there is a new standard of prices for wearing apparel, that in 1914 the textile and needle industries insofar as concerned labor were of the poorest paid industries and that they are now paying an adequate wage, and that the public should expect this condition to reflect itself in the future retail price of clothing, and that there is nothing in the present condition to warrant anyone in the belief that there can be any material reduction in the price of clothing."
