ROYAL WELCOME FOR NEW ANNUAL

Alpha Omicron Pi Leads in Individual Sale of Cornhuskers.

CO-EDS WORK LIKE DEMONS

Nebraska students greeted the Cornhusker Campaign yesterday with a royal welcome, and the sales of the first day exceeded the management's fondest expectations. Competition is running high among the fourteen teams selling Cornhuskers, as only thirty books separate the Alpha Omicron Pi's, who are leading and the last team.

The fourteen teams are putting forth their supreme efforts in today's drive, as only the seven highest teams will be permitted to sell during the last two days of the campaign. All subscription books are to be checked in by eight o'clock tonight.

Any student, who has promised his subscription to a girl should see to it that the order is in her hands by this evening, as all promises are off after tonight. After Wednesday night, the management asks the students to disregard all promises made to solicitors and buy their Cornhusker of the first girl on the job. The Cornhusker staff is forced to do this, as many students promise their books to certain solicitors, without any intention of buying a book and use the "I promised my order to so and so," as a loop hole to get out of buying a Cornhusker.

The rules and plans for the girls' basketball tournament will be announced at a meeting for all basketball girls, eleven o'clock Thursday. This is the outcome of a W. A. A. meeting at convocation hour Tuesday. The meeting was held in the Armory since there was no regular convocation. The small attendance at that meeting made it necessary to call another.

IVEY GETS FREAK LETTER FROM EAST

"New Yawk" Advocate of Simplified Spelling Writes University Professor.

Professor Ivey of the College of Business Administration received the following letter from Melvil Dewey, president of the Lake Placid Club of Essex Co., N. Y., in which a criticism is made of the usage of the term "salesperson." This is an exact reproduction of his letter and is not an example of negligence on the part of the proof-reader:

"Dear Prof. Ivey:— I am reading your article in the Publishers Weekly with pleasure & profit & am recommending them to our staff in our dept. store. They are so good that I am surprised that you take up that term salesperson. I am no parist or pedant & have introduced numerous words now found in the dictionary which duznt recognize salesperson. Its lyk saleslady, chairwoman & all of these words that ar voted pedantic or vulgar. It causes the ridicul of people who no & care about English when peopl talk about the chairwoman of a comitee, etc. Salesman means both

L. H. S. CARNIVAL WILL STAGE FRENCH CABARET

Waffles, Hamburgers and Cones May be Munched Between Minstrel Acts.

The third annual carnival of the Lincoln High School will be held Friday evening, March 12, in the high school building. This is the biggest undertaking of the year at the High School. A large number of alumni always attend. Everyone in the city is invited.

A larger number of students than ever before are taking part in the carnival. Mr. Ferguson's Minstrel Show in the auditorium is the main attraction. Special costumes, scenic effects and music have been prepared and the program promises to surpass the one staged last year. One of the unique features of the carnival is the faculty stunt under the direction of Mrs. Hiatt. The Writers' Club and many other organizations have also prepared special attractions. Refreshments will be served in the French cabaret. Waffles, hamburgers and ice cream will also be on sale in other parts of the building.

TRACK MEN TO MEET AT 7:30 TONIGHT IN CHAPEL

All University men who are interested in track are urged to be present in the chapel Wednesday evening at 7:30. Prospects and plans for the coming track season will be discussed at length.

Coach Schulte is very optimistic over the wealth of 1920 track material. "The opportunities for the development of track as a sport at the University of Nebraska are unlimited," he says. "We have the material here to beat Missouri and all the other universities in this part of the country. In no other state that I know of, is the state university so free from competition from other colleges as here at Nebraska. This University is the athletic centre of all Huskerland, and in track as well as in football, it should put out a team second to none in the country."

Because the 1920 season should be the greatest that has ever been known at Nebraska, every track man is asked to report tonight in the chapel. Numbers make easier the selection of the best material. Nebraska needs the best material.

BAILEY TO LEAD HUSKER PONIES

At Quiet Meeting of Nebraska Quintet New Captain is Elected.

NO PREVIOUS ELECTIONEERING

Russell Bailey was elected to the captaincy of the 1921 Cornhusker basketball team at a meeting of the Varsity in the athletic office held yesterday afternoon. No public announcement had been made of the meeting and the election went off in a very quiet manner.

That the team made an excellent choice when they elected Bailey as their leader for next year, there is no doubt. "Skipper" has played two seasons on the Varsity and is well qualified in every way for the honor bestowed upon him. His phenomenal work at guard this season has been one of the features of the year. In every home game and everywhere the team has played this year, Bailey has always performed in top-notch form and received praise from all critics.

Bailey comes from Hebron, where he was very prominent in high school athletics. He starred in football, basketball, and track at the Thayer county school. Since coming to the Cornhusker University he has confined his efforts to the game of basketball and is one of the greatest guards ever produced at Nebraska. It is a safe prophecy that next year he will be the most talked-of basketball player in the West.

LE ROSSIGNOL TO SPEAK AT ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Cannon, Tanks, Bottles, Ruins-- These Make Nebraska's France

Why go to France to see the devastated scenes of the World War, when you can see them right here in Lancaster County, Lincoln, Nebraska, reproduced on the campus of the State University? Gazing out of the upper story window of the Social Science building, "No Man's Land" is fully duplicated in all its vividness of portrayal. On the horizon shaggy trees raise their barren branches to the sky in mute appeal for protection. Deserted trenches filled with murk and grime, meet one's gaze as it goes from one horror-filled scene to another. Mud-drenched hovels which once were happy homes filled with sun shine and laughter, now greet the onlooker's gaze. Foundations which once supported these beautiful homes are exposed to the raven's pick and the starved hound's hungry clutches.

Here and there, can be gathered up relics to be treasured as mementos and placed on the parlor table or the time-honored mantle, so all visitors can see and hear the tales, when, where, how, and by whom the relics were found. Several old jugs, stoves, and numerous bottles (now empty) have been discovered as treasures of the past. These may be kept as souvenirs of the dead that have thirsted or the field of battle before July 1.

Amid these ancient ruins, telling a tale of heroism in hard-fought battles, Nebraska's soldiers of today, enlisted in the R. O. T. C. of the University, will wage their artillery combats, for this "No Man's Land" has been selected as the training field for the artillery of this unit. Already, big guns lend a martial air to the battle-scarred field.

Nebraska's France in all its glory may be visited any day. See the Campus First!

Now and then we can see some aged veteran returning to the place of his former location. We can see him wandering around aimlessly, in a vain attempt to locate some shattered bits of that which had been dear to him.

More than this, the ancient ruins of Greece are also reproduced on the campus as exact copies of the ancient days. The temple of Venus with its pillars remaining as a mute reminder of the old pompous days may be observed at the extreme right of the Teachers' College. Near by the remains of an old Roman bath can be discerned.

Campus Romeo Halts Woman In Black Entering Basement Window

It was a beautiful morning in March. Furthermore, it was a beautiful Sunday morning. The birds were singing gayly and the trees looked as though they might burst into leaf before long.

The campus was inhabited by a single stroller. This young man was Romeo Romancio who was longing for adventure. He had always longed for adventures and had always pictured himself as a young Lochinvar or a Lancelot seeking excitement. Just now he was deep in a day dream, wherein he was living the scenes which he had seen in the "movies" the night before. The hero had gone to France and had won the Croix de Diable, and had returned to find a burglar just entering the house of his beloved—Romeo stopped strolling long enough to find a sunny place on the steps of a building where he could sit and dream—he was just in the act of leaping upon the burglar and taking away all his weapons when he heard a dismal creak!

He drew himself up into a listening position and then he heard another creak! Here was his chance! He stole softly to the corner and peeped around. A dark form was there! It was standing in one of the window holes before a window that led into the basement of the building. Romeo noticed that the form was that of a woman. She carried a package—probably a bomb, or a bit of dynamite! So she was not a burglar after all; she was a bolshevist!

Perhaps she was the one who had put up the red flag on University Hall a few weeks before. "Creak, Creak" went the window. The woman was swearing in a low voice. Romeo heard her say distinctly—"If I don't get in here, they can just get that stuff themselves. (More news! She must be a burglar too, and she must have accomplices!) Romeo's eyes grew quite round. He saw himself marching boldly into the police station followed by the captured thugs. The chief was patting him on the back and saying—just then the window at which the woman had been working, gave way and the woman slowly raised the sash.

She started to climb in. Romeo stepped around the corner in time to hear her say—"Whew! It is hot in
