

Huskers Who Starred Against Rutgers

FLOYD WRIGHT.

Wright made a name for himself in gridiron circles by his brilliant open field running in the Rutgers game. He circled the ends for consistent gains and demonstrated his ability as a speedy halfback. Walter Camp should watch this Husker.

CLARENCE SWANSON.

Swanson was the chief point maker for the Cornhuskers against Rutgers. The speedy end was on the receiving end of two forward passes, both of which were good for touchdowns. He also played an excellent defensive game.

I Say:

When all the terribly foolish young things take the very sound advice of some nice doctor or doctorette who advocates a glass of milk in the middle of the morning and one in the afternoon won't it look funny to see them glance anxiously at their wrist watches in the middle of a class and then draw forth from one of those heretofore useless crocheted bags with the hideous flowers a small silver thermos bottle containing the precious fluid. Pour some of it into a dainty collapsible drinking cup such as will doubtless be invented for the purpose and thoughtfully sip the rejuvenating contents?

Chemistry Club To Hear Professor Moore

Prof. Burton E. Moore of the Physics Department, will lecture to the members of the Chemistry Club in the main lecture room of Brace hall, at 5 o'clock p. m., Friday, November 5. Professor Moore will demonstrate some valuable experimental apparatus which he has set up in the Physics laboratory. Unique methods of chemical analysis will be used in performing these experiments.

The use of the spectroscope and accessories in chemical analyses has opened up a new field of investigation, in which the two sciences of Physics and Chemistry co-operate. This instrument and its uses in Chemistry will be the key-note of Professor Moore's dissertation Friday afternoon.

Letters of Ex-Students

The following excerpts from letters which have been received from former Nebraska students who are attending other schools this year:

Gertrude Moran, ex-'23, who is attending Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, Illinois, this year writes: "Last Monday was Fall Field Day. It was a wonderful Indian summer day and we had our lunch on the lawn. Afterwards, our classes got together and paraded around with our mascots who wore two girls blacked up like the "Gold Dust Twins." We sang and gave yells, then we formed in companies and had athletic feats. In the evening the classes had table dinner parties. Everything was decorated with class colors, flowers, autumn leaves and serpentine paper with big candles on each table. Paper caps, horns and balloons were given out. You know this is a "prep" school for Wellesley, Vassar and Smith and how we have to study!"

Ruth Wilson, '20, who is taking graduate work at WWellesley, writes that the campus life, although different from that at Nebraska, is delightful. He campus itself is beautifully situated, she writes, and looks as though the whole plan was outlined by a landscape gardener. The trees looked like "cheese souffles with paprika wellpowdered on top" early in the fall, according to her vivid description of Massachusetts foliage. Although Wellesley has local sororities, they are far different from the nationals at Nebraska. In that they do not compete for members. "The girls here do not really appreciate WWellesley," she writes, "because they have not gone to a state university first."

Harold S. Morgan, ex-'23, who is now attending the University of Michigan, has written friends at the University that "Michigan is a wonderful school."

He said in part: "One of the big things of the school is the 'Union.' Every man in school belongs to it, paying five dollars a year at the time of fall registration. The Union building cost nearly $2,000,000 and is a massive structure. It has all the features of an exclusive club. Uniformed doormen are in evidence everywhere. You sign tickets for stuff you buy and pay high for it. All student activities have their headquarters in this building. It has a ballroom, several dining rooms, and a swimming pool. The bowling alleys are a feature. They have a billiard expert to teach you the game. They only pay him $7,000 a year. Soft, isn't it?"

WILL the person who took the two text books and note book from in front of the Library, please return them to the Student Activities office. 11

One Customer Saved $18,000

During the last three years one customer of The Kline Publishing Company has made a saving of $18,000.00.

This customer is the State of Nebraska, the largest consumer of printing in this section.

During the last year the various publications which had contracts with this firm benefited by the phenomenal rise in paper prices. During the next six months they will also reap dividends.

The Kline Publishing Company is organized to meet the special needs of those who wish to publish papers, periodicals, booklets or pamphlets. Arrangements have also been made for the filling of contracts demanding artistic bookbinding.

The plant is second to none. The industrial organization includes profit sharing and insurance features. If you wish to save money on your printing contracts in the coming period of keen competition, consult our Service Department.
