Poets Write Of The Red, Red Hair

FIRST PRIZE FOR QUANTITY.
 (Heroic lines to a Red Head who goes in for mass—mindful of the long line of imposters who have drawn awards for the beauty of their shimmering tresses, when they often possessed but one and that one long and glossy.)
Quantity.
 Let others sing the songs of spring
 And trill of Titian tresses,
 Go wind the wreathes, and tributes bring
 With tenderest caresses.
 These maidens fair with glowing hair
 Give poets themese to scan on.
 For years there's been deception

there—
 It's time to tie the can on.
 I yodel now with lofty brow
 Of hairs which come in bunches,
 Which pyramid upon the lid
 In countless dips and hunches.
 Give me that prize! You recognize
 No vampire here can stop me!
 Just lamp with keen judicial eyes
 The bales of hair atop me!
 —Jessie Gretchen Beghtol Lee.
FIRST PRIZE FOR THE REDDEST HAIR.
A Chile Con Carne Queen.
 (Free verse after the manner of Carl Sandburg and others who fill our best magazines and books.)
 When it is night
 And I step out to quaff
 A silver drink from off the corners of the moon,
 I hear a crying
 Like the wail of weeping women.

It is the moonbeams,
 Spluttering and scolding to themselves.
 They wrap their heads in silver shawls
 And nod and sparkle as they speak
 "Here's that old sun again," they say.
 "He's cheating us—He's shining over time,
 We'll speak to God and have him reprimanded.
 Curse his rays!"
 —Jessie Gretchen Beghtol Lee.

ALSO, THE CROTCH IS REINFORCED WITH CLOTH. A DOUBLE CROTCH IS ACTUALLY MADE TO DOUBLE THE STRENGTH AND LIFE OF THE TROUSERS.

We invite you to view the new Stratford styles which we are now showing
