All W. A. A. Girls Are Hard at Work in Attempt To Earn Right to Wear "N"

The busiest girl on the campus is the W. A. A. member in the quest of an "N" sweater. She has a heavily booked sport season that would make a Dempsey trainer turn pale. The remains of the soccer ball is no sooner laid away until the hockey club is snatched from the rack and back to the field she hurries to batter up her opponents' shins, and chase the ball down the field.

There is hiking by day and swimming by night that helps make life a strenuous one, not to mention tennis and golf. There is dancing, with the required gymnasium work thrown in for exercise. Basketball seasons looms before her eyes at the first of the year, and this means more work than ever, for this is the most popular sport of all and every one else wants to knock her chances on the team cold. Spring and out of doors means baseball, track and more hiking before the year can be laid aside. Baseball comes at the time of the year when every one wants to be out, and every one thinks that Babe Ruth is a mere trifle, beside her own skill in slugging. It is a weary athlete that winds up her busy season on the cinder track, but not too weary to break a few university records, with a world's record smashed, and one tied.

Yes the girl who wears an "N" sweater, begins to realize where the name for that proud jacket really originated.

Co-Eds Have Great Fun Cracking Shins in Game of Hockey

If one of these chizzly days a heavily armed group of co-eds run into you, be not afraid. It is only a squad of W. A. A. girls making for the hockey field to try out their new clubs in a period of scrappy practice. The game is a hot one. One never knows when her shins will be the next whacked. The most languid creature that ever hovered over a cup of tea may swing the most wicked stick on the field, so be careful. Then there is the golf player, who tries to inject the drive in the hockey game, and at the same time puts the lives of near-by players in danger. But all this puts spice in the game for the real players.

JOURNALISTIC TRAINING ON PROFESSIONAL BASIS

Need of Strong National Organization of Newspaper Men.

"With the development of schools of Journalism, training for newspaper work is passing out of the apprenticeship method of the trades into the college method of the other professions like law, medicine, and engineering," said Prof. Willard G. Bleyer, director of journalism at the University of Wisconsin and president of the American association of teachers of journalism, in addressing the students of the Medill school of journalism at Chicago.

"Just as with the development of professional training for law and medicine, the state has set up higher-and higher standards for the practice of these professions, so it is not unlikely that, because of the importance of newspapers in shaping public opinion, definite requirements will be established for admission to the profession of journalism," he continued.

"The success of our democratic form of government depends on sound public opinion, which is the composite of individual private opinions.

Individual citizens form their opinions largely if not entirely on the basis of the news that they read in the newspapers.

"It is even more important to the state that the newspaper men and women who gather, write and edit the news be well informed and well trained for their work, that that lawyers and doctors be qualified to practice their professions.
