OUR HONOR MEN.

Again members of our football team brought great honor to Nebraska Sunday, when they were chosen as members of Walter Eckersall's mythical all-American teams. To John Pucelik comes the honor of being the first Nebraskan to be chosen on an all-American by a recognized authority in the pigskin sport.

Captain Swanson was placed on Eckersall's second all-American. With such men as Wallace of Ames, Keck of Princeton, Killinger of Penn State and Mohardt of Notre Dame, it is easily seen how high Swanson is held in the eyes of this football authority.

To have two representatives among the thirty-three chosen by the Chicago sports writer shows how the country is beginning to recognize the west, particularly Nebraska.

With most of our twenty-four letter men returning to school next year, the team should be a better one than we had this year. Dawson, when he took charge, knew little about the respective abilities of the men from whom he had to whip a team into shape. Next year he will not be handicapped this way for his men are tested, and they on the other hand are used to his coaching methods.

Nebraska although it loses both Swanson and Pucelik, should have a team next year that has no equal anywhere in the United States.

THE THIRD AWGwan.

For the third time this year the Awgwan greets Nebraska's student body. The staff after three months of working together shows steady improvement and the magazine is one not to be equaled by any college comic in the United States.

Full of clever jokes, yet with a little touch of seriousness here and there, it is a treat for anyone fortunate enough to obtain a copy of this publication. The staff worked hard and long on this last issue and the splendid result of this effort is readily seen after it has been given the "once over."

Nebraska is fortunate to have such a publication as this is, and the students are doubly fortunate in being able to obtain copies of it so that the folks at home may learn of the frivolities of University life from a clever, clean-cut paper of this kind.

THE OLD YEAR.

The old year is fast drawing to a close, and very soon the final chapter will have been added. It is not only the old year that is dying, if we are to judge by observation, for ambition seems to be waning as well. A warning in this connection is timely for the student, in looking forward to vacation at the end of the year, may lose sight of the fact that his obligations do not cease until the time has actually arrived.

It is a regrettable fact that some students have a tendency to grow slack in their efforts toward the end of the year. Some think that because they have a good grade now they can drift for a while and pass on their reputation. The result will be that their reputation will suffer a severe shock, and they will find to their own grief, that forbidden fruit is not always sweetest. School is an up-hill course, and it is not possible to coast at any time. Quite naturally, the prospect of vacation makes the spirits soar and tempts the fancy to roam, but at the peril of your position in good grace. The time of reckoning will come for those who permit their minds to go vacationing before they are given official freedom. There is another year coming after this one, also another hard siege of school. What is not accomplished now will have to be done next year, and it is bad policy to carry this kind of debts over from the old year to the new.

It is not natural to slacken speed when entering upon the home stretch; one is usually anxious to finish with flying colors. It shows lack of real spirit and patriotism to deliberately give up and try to drift when the end is in sight. Besides it is not the school year that is closing.

Contemporary Opinion.

SPEED UP.

The more work a man has to do the more he is able to do. This statement may be disputed by some, but it is a known fact. On the campus, as well as in the business world, we leave the many things to the few who are keyed up to the high point of working fast and efficiently. Authorities tell us that students who are engaged in athletics do better work in their studies during the time they are in training than after they have let down in the grind. There are several reasons for this. First of all, a man who is engaged in some form of athletic competition, has to systematize his work to find time for study as well as athletics. He is in better physical condition, and as a result his body helps speed up his brain.

Athletic persons are cited simply as an example, for they are not the only persons on the campus or in outside life who do much work because they have much to do. We find that there are men who have no connection with any sort of athletic endeavor who are carrying enough work to stagger several ordinary students. This is because they have speeded up to a point above that reached by their fellow students. They have extended themselves. They are not content to move slowly, act slowly, think slowly or get results slowly.

Look to the men who head large enterprises of any sort, whether in school or out, and take them for examples. The big men are the ones who are engaged in more than one activity, although they may have only one line in which they are expert. They do more than just what is required. They do what is needed and then find new things to do. They find it takes little more effort to do many things well than to do them halfheartedly or poorly.

Let us not worry about lack of time. When work comes along too fast, instead of giving up everything and saying, "the world has been too much for me," find something to add to what you are doing already and though you may have less time to spare, you will find you have more time in which to do things.—A. S. T.

Student Opinion.

To the Editor of The Daily Nebraskan: The athletic department has announced a policy of "every student in athletics," which every one knows is the way to put Nebraska on the map in other lines than football. The results are seen already in the increased numbers out for cross-country, wrestling and other minor sports. Already the track squad is assuming warlike proportions, the wrestling squad is overflowing, and as many men reported for cross-country as did for football. Twenty-four letters were awarded in football within a few hours of the last game and the order for sweaters is being pushed. In cross-country, after meeting world's record men in competition, with the season coincident with football, no letters have been awarded, nor has the promised "feed" materialized. The wrestling department needs more room.

The men have answered the call in minor sports. Now what is the department going to do?

A CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNER.

To the Editor of The Daily Nebraskan—Is the student body of the University of Nebraska democratically represented? The majority of the students in Nebraska will say that it is not. It is a well known fact that all university activities are in the hands of the minority, the fraternities. The fraternities are strongly organized bodies of students and for this reason they carried practically unanimously in every election for the last thirty years at Nebraska. The fraternities will have to admit this. It simply shows what organizations will do. Yet there appeared in the Student Opinion column of The Daily Nebraskan, an article among non-fraternity men and women, on the grounds that it would cause too much friction between the two factions. Just why he is willing to lie down and peacefully submit to the rule of the Greek organizations he did not state. If it is right for one body of students to organize what reasonable argument can be put forth that it is wrong for another body of students to organize?

Certainly there would be no more friction between these two factions than there is now between the present split factions. A campaign to this effect would simply mean a fair race between Greek and non-Greek men and women for class offices and in all student activities. What fairer proposition can be asked for by non-frat students?

To meet the demand of non-Greek students for a better and more democratic Nebraska, a Barb organization should be formed to make the idea "A More Democratic Nebraska" become a reality.

"A LOYAL BARB."

LINCOLN, Nebr., Dec. 8, 1921.—To the Editor of The Daily Nebraskan: A Barb (Husker) Booster has presented his idealistic attitude in an opinion against Barb organization. He states that such an organization would create a great deal of friction and would be directed against the Greeks. However, he should recognize the fact that competition stimulated interest, sharpens the qualities of the different factors, and forces the most fitted to the front, the University, consequently, reaping a greater benefit.

Also, the fraternities may be the logical solution for many of the housing and social problems but why should these organizations run the politics of the university when they are only one-third its representation? And again, would not dormitories for the men as well as for the women solve those housing and social problems?

The writer states that the offices "should be filled by the most capable men in the school," and then states "that it is up to the dominant fraternity organizations to see that this happens." That would indeed show great magnanimity on the part of the Greeks if they would recognize 'the most capable' of the school as a whole rather than their own group. But he is forgetting the fundamental principle of the fraternity when he presents such a plan. Can you imagine a man boosting for an outsider rather than for his own brother? No more would a fraternity man consider a non-fraternity man more qualified than his fraternity brother. This is an excellent ideal, but theories do not always work out in practice.

In order that we may reach the true Democracy in the university a representation of all the students must be had. Such representation can be had only by the organization of the unorganized. Such an organization is the only solution and in my estimation, inevitable.

"FOR BARB ORGANIZATION."
