NEBRASKA MEN ON ALL-AMERICANS

charge and splendid ability to diagnose the opponents' play. He is also a man behind who a star quarter could run or could use his backs to run, sure at all times of their following a man who would always be moving forward rather than being forced back. He is quick as a cat, can watch an end and check him if he is starting down on a forward pass, and still be ready for a shift or running play. He is most adept at moving out or in, and this makes a world of trouble for his opponents. Stein of Washington and Jefferson is rated as a tackle and has been in that position in the lineup most of the season. Some idea of his quality can be gathered from the fact, however, that he plays as a sort of cover behind the line on defense, and on offense plays end, and also is taken into the back field to run with the ball. He has been the main factor in Washington and Jefferson's team both on attack and defense, and has literally beaten anything that has appeared against him throughout the season. This gives us still another man who can star in carrying the ball so that no back need be used to the point of exhaustion. In fact, no all-America team that has ever been picked possessed such an additional offensive force as this one in Stein and Roberts, added to their back field at will.

The guards are Schwab of Lafayette and Brown of Harvard. Schwab is a strong, active, brainy player with a physique that equips him fully for the job. He was the star of the Lafayette line at all times. No opponent has been able to match him this season. He opens a line for the runner splendidly and on defense is impregnable, and as active as that great former all-America tackle, Henry of Washington and Jefferson. Brown of Harvard gets the other position, not so much as a showy player but because much of Harvard's efficiency came through his work. Like some other star Harvard guards of the past, Brown was tremendously effective in holding up and gradually wearing down the opposition of teams who came against him. This steady pressure upon his opponents was well in evidence in both the Princeton and the Yale games. In addition to this he is an exceptional man for a back to follow, in that the opening or the pressure comes at just the right minute for the brainy back to take advantage of it, and not so early as to provide the secondary defense with a warning of what is coming. It was he who made the pathway for Owen on many of his so effective line drives.

The center position is given to Vick of Michigan, as he is about the only man who has throughout the season added great power and aggressiveness to steadiness and consistency of work. Too many centers this year have fallen in steadiness, even though stars in other respects. But Vick has combined all the qualities of defense with steady passing and quick diagnosis of the attack of the opponents. A center on the all-America team must be absolutely reliable in feeding the ball to his backs, and at the same time a high class defensive man, and Vick combines these qualities.

The quarterback position is given to Aubrey Devine of Iowa, indeed a star among stars. He can run, kick, forward pass, catch, and in fact, he is a threat in all four ways to opponents. Besides that, his play has been a model of consistency throughout the season on a team which has some undefeated. Devine has wonderful qualities as a general, being able to size up the strength and weakness of his opponents very rapidly and to make use of this knowledge. He is stacky of build and of the enduring type, a great asset in a quarterback of today, who must in addition to his extended field of passing and carrying the ball, be able to interfere and take hard knocks without exhaustion or injury. His team met no foe strong enough for it and defeated that sterling aggregation, Notre Dame, largely thru his work.

The halfback positions go to Killinger of Penn State and Aldrich of Yale—two shining lights of the 1921 gridiron. Killinger was rated as a quarter on his team, but played virtually the halfback position. He has the most peculiar elusiveness of any back on the field this year, and that, too, when apparently about to be stopped. Killinger has accomplished this feat against every team he has opposed. Of course there was no opportunity of jurgung his quality or that of any other back on the muddy field at Pittsburgh, and he and Tom Davies of Pittsburgh suffered alike. In the Georgia Tech. game, when the score stood 7 to 0 against his team, Killinger received a kick-off on his 20 yard line and ran for the touchdown which tied the score and restored the confidence of his whole team.

Aldrich of Yale gets the other half back position by a considerable margin, as a man who combines high will power with the skill necessary to answer to that spirit. Remarkably agile and with a fine side-step, he ran thru everything he faced this year. He also field-kicked his team to victories. He forward-passed well. He overtook a man who, by intercepting a forward pass or coming through some other position, threatened danger to Yale. His name will be written large in annals of football as a player without a flaw.

The back position goes to Kaw of Cornell, the greatest performer on a muddy field the writer has ever seen. What Kaw did in other games on a dry field might possibly be done by one of our other stars, but what he did in Cornell's main contest, her final game of the season, against Pennsylvania, in a sea of mud, could not be done by any other back in the game. He is a thoroughly all-around man, kicker, forward passer, catcher, and has the greatest lunge forward when about to be tackled of any man in the backfield today. He tears loose, or else his lunge carries the tackler straight back for a yard or two. He can handle and kick a wet, slimy ball. His team found no opponent who could stop Kaw and it continued unbeaten, defeating Dartmouth 59 to 7 and Pennsylvania 41 to 0, largely through the performance of this star.

Protected Against Every Contingency. In looking this team over, we find that we are well protected against any possible contingencies. And that is a factor that has made more champion teams than probably any other asset. First, we have a center who is absolutely accurate. Next, a quarterback of sound judgment, a real general, and a man who is sturdy enough to last through a game or a season. We have a pair of ends who are absolutely certain to get down the field under kicks. We have four men in the back field, on kicks or forward passes by the opponents, any of whom—Aldrich, Killinger, Kaw, or Devine—is likely to turn a caught punt in mid-field into a long run. We have in Stein and Vick a pair of men, either of whom can play a roving position on defense with telling effect, and we have in Schwab and Brown men who can stop up any gap in the middle, while in McGuire we have a tackler whom the interference cannot put out, and who, in fact, is likely to break through that interference and down the runner.

This Year's Best Teams.

The outstanding teams of the year have been finer scoring machines than football has ever developed before. The University of California dominated the Pacific coast with a really remarkable aggregation. In the middle west, Iowa, under Howard Jones, came to the front and won the Middle West conference championship. Centre college of Kentucky, under Moran, had an unbroken succession of victories, and defeated Harvard, Georgia Tech., under Alexander dominated the south and also defeated Rutgers overwhelmingly, but lost to Penn State. Notre Dame, under Rockne, suffered a defeat at the hands of Iowa early in the season, but played a strong schedule and went undefeated with that exception, beating the Army 28 to 0, Rutgers 48 to 0, and Nebraska 7 to 0. Nebraska also easily led her section.

KAPPA PSI HOLDS SEMI ANNUAL BANQUET SUN.

Gamma Upsilon chapter of Kappa Psi held its semi-annual banquet at the Grand hotel Sunday evening. The tables were placed in a square with floral decorations in the center. On the tables were vases of American Beauty roses, the fraternity flower, and the room was tastily decorated in red and white streamers.

The entire faculty of the college of pharmacy were present and Doctors Lyman and Schneider and Professor Burt responded with toasts. Robert Hardt acted as toast master and William Simpson gave the address of welcome to the guests and pledges of the chapter. Kappa Psi has entered upon its second year in Nebraska pharmaceutical activities and during that time has made progress in its chosen line.

LIVE STOCK JUDGING TEAM IS BANQUETED

Professor Wm. H. Savin, animal husbandry coach, entertained the Nebraska live stock judging team at dinner, at the Lincolnshire club Sunday noon. Twenty-four guests were seated at a large table. A centerpiece of red roses furnished the decorations. The judging team was also entertained at dinner Thursday of last week at the home of professor and Mrs. Gramlich. Covers were laid for seventeen. A small Christmas tree graced the center of the table and a roast pig was the feature of the occasion.
