LUEHRING HAS GONE

Fred W. Luehring, formerly director of athletics at the University of Nebraska, has officially turned over the administrative reins to Fred Dawson and vacated the little two-by-four office he occupied in the Armory. It must have been with a sigh of relief, as he left these inadequate, cramped quarters for the last time; but we believe, too, that he must have felt a tinge of regret because Nebraskans had learned to love him and he had many pleasant associations.

Luehring has more than made good during his residence in Nebraska and we have nothing but words of commendation for him and his work. When he came to Lincoln he was tendered many glittering promises as to equipment, capital, etc. But these dreams failed to materialize and with the ever-present lack of adequate facilities, the job became too small for Luehring. A larger field has claimed him.

He may come back sometime. He is not so very far away and we expect to see him often. Conditions will not always be hopeless at Nebraska. Someday we will have gymnasiums and stadiums to our hearts' content, and then—Luehring may come back.

HEAR JOHSI

Yesterday you read that Professor Jhosi, of India, will be at the University of Nebraska on March 17 and speak to university students under the auspices of the International Relations Club. His subjects will be the Ghandi movement, which is most talked of topic in India today and one that should interest Nebraska students. Professor Jhosi is a graduate of Oxford University, England, and speaks the English language every fluently.

Nebraska students should seize every opportunity to hear a speaker of this kind. You should strive to get the viewpoint of just as many outstanding personalities as possible. Mr. Jhosi is one of the leading thinkers in the land from which he comes and the thoughts he expresses will convey the ideas of the leading minds of India. There is always a tendency on the part of students to become self-centered and narrow-minded and here is one way in which this condition can be counteracted.

The International Relations Clubs brings speakers to the campus who are always well worth hearing. They come from all the leading countries of the world and present the most vital topics of discussion. Whenever you read of an address under the auspices of the International Relations Club, don't fail to attend.

ADAM AND EVA

The play is a good one. Although it received a lot of false and undue publicity by certain state papers it portrays a very excellent story of modern American life.

It is very well played. The University Players deserve great credit for this production. It is easily one of the best they have produced this season and we are told it bids fair to be a record breaker in attendance. Every part is well handled and the characterization perfect.

The Players have spent a great deal of time on this play. They deserve the support of the student body. Remember that they are working hard to promote the activities of the organization and receive only the glory for their work.

Don't fail to see Adam and Eva.

Contemporary Opinion

TOUGH, ISN'T IT?

It's going to be an awful hard spring for bowlegged men. Knickers seem to have arrived. And although there are certain advantages in being bowlegged, wearing knickers is not one of them.

Knickers may be all right, but they don't mean anything. They are excellent for sport wear, and battling around the countryside, or some such diversion. But as to their utility for everyday wear, no one can say conclusively. George Washington and Napoleon Bonaparte wore them and yet became great men. Abraham Lincoln and General Pershing did not wear them and yet became great men. Draw your own conclusions.

However, fashion dictates what to wear (except when one happens to be broke, and then he wears anything he can find or borrow.) So that if the craze seems to go far enough, it is possible that knickers may cease to be a luxury and advance into the necessity class. If so, as we said before, it will be highly embarrassing for bowlegged persons.—Ohio State Lantern.
