

MORTARBOARD HOST TO JUNIOR CO-EDS

Third Year Girls Entertained at St. Patrick's Day Party at Ellen Smith Hall

Mortarboard, Senior girls' honorary society entertained all Junior girls at a Saint Patrick's day party at Ellen Smith hall from three until five Saturday afternoon. About one hundred girls attended the party. As each girl arrived she was decorated with a shamrock with her name written on it. This served as a get-acquainted feature.

A program consisting of a violin solo by Nina York and an Irish costume dance by Frances Carrothers was followed by dancing. Clever favors in the shape of "lollypop" dolls were given to the guests.

Refreshments were served in the dining room where green candles and green tinted sweet peas formed the decorations for the serving table. The St. Patrick idea was carried out in the refreshments.

MANY STUDENTS HEAR SPEECH BY PROFESSOR JOSHI

 found there by archeological experts who reported that India must have had extensive trade with the Great Roman Empire. Alex the Great came in contact with India in 330 B. C. For the most part, Professor Joshi pointed out the travel at this time was on land and the Mohammedanist rise in the east shut off the western traffic. This led to the discovery of America but for a time India was cut off from Europe.

The Portuguese, French, Dutch and English contact with the east was reviewed by Professor Joshi, who created great development in India to the English "East India Company." "It was this contest for eastern trade," said Professor Joshi, "that probably continued to be a cause of the Great War which has just come to a close." The steam engine changed the British attitude toward India. England began to handle the raw goods shipped from India and India was brought into close relationship with the British Empire.

The attitude of the English with regard to education and the immigration problems toward the Indian Empire was scored by Professor Joshi. The impression of the citizen of India is that the English do not have respect for the dark races just because they have dark skins. "English people in England are sympathetic with the Indian desire for independence," said the speaker.

The education of the peoples of India is in a deplorable state. Less than one percent of the women are educated and the illiteracy among the men is alarming. It is for controlling the finances of the wealthy nation in such a way as to get money for education that the people are now striving. Mohammedan influence caused the seclusion of the women and the reduction of the age of marriage in India. This is a factor in the stage of illiteracy for women are married before they have a chance to study in the outside towns which are in contact with the world, the women are few beginning to awake. They are attending universities in some cases, said Professor Joshi, but the "Mohammedan contact is a blight upon India," was the way he expressed the influence of this religion.

The speaker reviewed the marriage conditions of India and indicated that the girl in India is not safe even to this day. They are married by horoscope and their grooms are selected by the parents, usually the eldest woman in the family.

In touching upon the educational problems, Professor Joshi said he could use from ten to one hundred thousand teachers in India today. Woman physicians are also in demand and there is great opportunity for the person who wants to sacrifice for the good of that great nation.

A reference to the great hero of India, Gandhi, was made by Professor Joshi in closing his lecture. "He is a little body with a great soul," said the speaker. He is anxious to have the loyalty of India in the great war rewarded with liberty and treatment like the rest of the British family. Gandhi advocates economic independence and political independence of India. He supported the movement for boycott of goods from England and the imports were greatly reduced. Spinning wheels from America are being used to help the cause.

The Mohammedan unrest was caused by the broken English promise that Turkey would not be harmed after the war. "This promise was given the Mohammedans in India if they would fight in the war," said Professor Joshi, "for the seat of the Mohammedan religion is in Turkey." He pointed out that the English went back on their promise to the Indian Mohammedans and that this question has been a great factor in the unrest of India.

All of these questions are culminating in the coming appointment of the Secretary of India, said Professor Joshi in closing.
