OUR VISITING JOURNALISTS

Next Saturday, May 13, Nebraska University will be the host to a great many high school men and women who will journey many miles to participate in the various activities planned for that day.

On that day the annual High School track meet will take place and the finals in the State Debating League will be heard. Both the track meet and the debate are annual events at the University and through these two events many students have become acquainted with our school and had a desire created to attend the university.

This year another worthwhile event will take place. Theta Sigma Phi and Sigma Delta Chi, the two journalistic fraternities for men and women, will entertain editors of high school papers who have been invited to spend the day at Nebraska.

The program for the day will be a night they will be busy visiting the offices of the school's publications, listen to talks by professors of journalism, inspect the plants of the two large dailies, dine at the Commercial Club, and at the end of the day be given a chance to secure help in meeting any of the problems that may be confronting them in their work on the high school papers.

Any new enterprise has difficulties in getting started and this journalistic convention has had its share. Next year it will be easier to handle, more editors will attend and the help that the older "brothers and sisters" in the profession may give to those that attend them will be proportionately greater.

Theta Sigma Phi and Sigma Delta Chi certainly justify their existence by this constructive move and the Daily Nebraskan wishes them luck and success in this new undertaking.

OUR TRACK TEAM

Saturday morning last the Husker track team journeyed to Kansas to meet the Jayhawk squad in a dual meet. Yesterday Nebraska's team was back again at the hard grind of practice, after a most successful trip.

The team decisively Kansas and as Kansas up until this time has had the most feared squad in the Valley, Nebraska may rightfully say "Well done," to their victorious team.

Nebraska may well be proud of its team.

THE LAWNMOWER

The lawnmower has come to life again! Last fall it was consigned to its rest with many a murmured "good work," but with the coming of spring it is hauled out of its hiding place and given a fresh start on its career of usefulness. It hibernated during the winter in its dungeon and no one thought of disturbing its repose.

At any rate they have been dug out of their dungeon. We are awakened in the morning by an incessant clatter and investigation discloses someone shaving the grass beneath the window. The sun goes down at night to the tune of lawnmowers. There are batteries of them in action all over the campus, if they are not in action one meets them parked against a tree or some other conspicuous place where one can be reminded that they are on duty. We wonder how big the campus seems to the keeper when he begins to cut the grass with a lawnmower.

Some lawnmowers work gleefully while other labor painfully along as if they had a cylinder or something missing. They grate and buzz and groan persistently. Even as this ode is being written one of the asthmatic implements is being operated nearby and is serving as an inspiration. The dying wheeze of a lawnmower is so inspiring. It is a good thing that some genius invented these machines, otherwise we would most surely have to remove the iron fence and import a herd of cattle to pasture on the grass lest we get lost in it.

Contemporary Opinion

A MAN'S SPORT

The boxing tournament made a few new champs and furnished the vehicle for a couple of trips into dreamless slumber. That's the part the public saw and appreciated.

Far more important than the spectacular showing made by the annual tournament is the training received by the two hundred men who take the boxing course every year. Winning the tournament is merely an indication that they have learned their lesson a little better than their fellow classmates—that they have earned an "A" in the course.

As a sport calculated to develop the best in men, amateur boxing has no superior. Aggressiveness, self-assurance, general physical development are all fostered by it. When one man faces his opponent in the squared circle, he is for once in his life entirely on his own. There is no one to take the burden of his mistakes, no one to take up the fight while he gets his second wind. It's slap, bam, smash and the best man win.

Boxing kept on a strictly amateur basis as at the University of Minnesota is a course which every man should take. Pass or flunk, he will get something out of it. The winners gain a confidence which is invaluable. There are no losers. No matter how little a man learns, that little gives him an initial advantage over the rest of the world. Boxing, fighting, manly art of self-defense—call it what you will, it's a man's sport.

The Exhaust

There's a "Kick" in Kiss Comics
 There's a "kick" to every kiss according to a University professor who has invented the Kissograph. This device measures the "kick" of the kiss. Taking a man and woman who will osculate, the inventor attaches wires to them. Then they kiss. The machine acts automatically and measures the linear extent and the millimeters of blood pressure resulting from the mistletoe kiss, the stolen kiss, the expert kiss of the finished flirt, and the soul kiss. So sensitive is the Kissograph that it will also register the domestic kiss, the degree of rigidity in kisses one woman gives another whom she does not like, and all the other 77 varieties. The Kissograph is an adaptation of the sphygmometer which psychologists use to detect lies. There's a "kick" to every "Topics of the Day" Films' program, which often includes some kiss jokes. And there's a "kick" to our selection of kiss comics.

The second issue of the "University Journal" for the year 1922 is off the press. On the cover, done in black and white, is an attractive drawing by D. Kirsch. The sketch portrays a lady seated and reading the University of Nebraska school. The issue contains editorial comment by the secretary, Harold Holtz, news of the alumni clubs, university news, the morning mail, news of classes, marriages and several special articles of interest to alumni. Ben M. Cherrington, who since his adieu to Nebraska university in 1911, has carefully laid the foundation of a career which found him particularly adapted for the work of traveling from university to university in the interest of the Y. M. C. A., is the author of an article, "Impressions Regarding the Student Situation in Europe," in which he tells of the most important facts he noted relative to the universities abroad. Another interesting article in the edition is, "National Highways and the University."

Dr. Barbour, head of the university museum, talked by wireless to the Kiwanis Club of Grand Island Friday on the subject, "The Resources of the State." This address was scheduled for a week ago, but had to be postponed because of the inability of the Grand Island station to complete arrangements by that time.

On Thursday, May 11, there will be a convocation at which the Seward high school band will play. This organization is under the direction of William Larsen, who took his bachelor of fine arts degree in 1920. Mr. Larsen has been supervisor of the Seward schools for the past two years and has developed an excellent band and orchestra. The convocation will be held in the Temple theater.
