THE SUMMER NEBRASKAN

The University of Nebraska Summer session is to see the advent of a new publication—The Summer Nebraskan. Three times a week during the twelve-week school period this publication is to serve the same purpose that the Daily Nebraskan does during the regular fall and spring terms.

Those in charge of the paper are going to try to make it of interest to the winter students by running personal and sports columns. Thus all students may keep in touch with each other and with their school.

A subscription campaign starts tomorrow in an effort to get students to subscribe for this paper. The price is to be fifty cents for the thirty-six issues of the paper and includes all mailing fees. Little of the fifty cents will go on the profit side of the ledger.

For the summer students this publication will do a great deal, for what would we do without the Rag to advise us about lectures, registration, athletic meets and parties? The lack of organizations during the summer months makes the school very lifeless and if this paper succeeds and prospers it will be possible to create the school spirit and the Nebraska love that is in our hearts.

Boosting the summer paper will boost Nebraska!

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS AGAIN

At present it seems that athletics is one of the most absorbing topics current among the women of the university. Interest seems to be divided between baseball, tennis and track and there is so much enthusiasm evidenced in each of these sports that it is hard to decide which is the most popular one. It is certainly encouraging to see the girls take such an active interest in athletics. Not only is it a healthful and most enjoyable exercise, but the friendly antagonism that it arouses between the teams is an element that creates real interest and spirit in the girls' sphere of athletics.

Nebraska girls are displaying a marked degree of excellence in sports. In the recent track meet one of Nebraska's contestants broke a world record and several others tied state records. More laurels for Nebraska's name. Perhaps it will make those who have been indifferent sit up and take notice. The average ability of the large number of entrants would tend to indicate that they will rank high as a class.

Nearly every day one can see a ball game in progress on the field east of Social Science. With the tournament coming on each team is practicing hard, and the finals will undoubtedly be warmly contested. As an interested spectator at one of the girls' games remarked: "The game would be perfect if the pitcher would just spit on her hands."

The tennis courts are scenes of great rivalry as that sport is drawing a large quota of enthusiastic followers from among the rank of co-eds. The approaching tennis tournament is the great incentive that prompts her to excel in wielding the racket. In every phase of sports the girls are doing their best to win and be a credit to their school.

The Nebraska Girl's Creed says: "I believe that school spirit can best be shown by our boosting Nebraska as a whole, above all other schools. Talk Nebraska, think Nebraska, and live Nebraska and the more you do for her the more she will mean to you." The girls are certainly living up to their creed as far as athletics are concerned.

The Exhaust

We always thought that Woodrow Wilson could stand on his own merits, but it develops that he needs the students of the University to establish his foundation.

In the Co-Ed track meet, we sincerely hope that none of the aspiring feminine athletes will meet the track—accidentally.

The campus excavators are on the job—some of them on the front yard of Social Science Building and some on the place where the fence used to be. Are they "Forty-niners" or Hooch hounds?

The Bizads nearly started a riot this morning—everyone thought something terrible had happened when the Bizads actually stood in line!

What's the dope on the Stupid Council.

There's compensation in losing the fence So while we say alas!—Remember there's nothing to keep the studes From treading on the grass.

The method of conversation formerly known as Yiddish has deteriorated until it is in use even by Anglo Saxons.

SENIOR FESTIVITIES AT CRETE MARK LAST GATHERING OF CLASS

Little children—this is the University. What is all that big mob there in front of the Administration Building? That is the Senior class waiting to go on their picnic. They will start before very long as it is almost eight o'clock. Where are they going? They are going to Horkey's Park at Crete. What is that? Why, that is a nice park, with a river and a dance pavilion and swings, and chutes and slides and everything. Where did all those cars come from? No, they don't all belong to Seniors. They belong to anybody that wanted to furnish a car today.

What are they going to do down at Crete? They are going to have a keen time. There is going to be an interclass baseball meet and all the tennis courts will be fixed up and there will be all kinds of chances to go in swimming in the nice warm water. Are they going to dance? Yes, there will be an orchestra playing all afternoon in the pavilion, and it is going to be a really jaxx orchestra with lots of pep.

And eats? Yes—they won't starve today. Mrs. Avery and a number of Crete ladies are fixing up the best lunch any picnic crowd ever gazed on, and licked the platter clean right afterwards.

It's the last time the Seniors will ever get together, and so they get a whole day off right in the middle of the week. Wasn't it nice of the Chancellor to give them this perfect day picnic and not charge them a cent? Yes, indeed, it was. Three cheers for the Chancellor.

Here are the principal parts of an irregular verb: Flunks, flunkive, faculty, flunkies.

Ruth: I believing in telling all I know. Elizabeth: You must lead a quiet life then.

Here's to the faculty, Long may they live, Even as long As the lessons they give.

Mr. Bruning: What is water? Corlette: Water is a colorless fluid which turns black when I put my hands in it.

CARE OF A POODLE (Views of Miss Constance Jones) "Patsy is a great deal more than just a dog to me," said Miss Constance Jones when Dog Catcher Lewis appeared at her home, 1900 E 19th, to collect the yearly tax imposed upon the canine species of the animal kingdom. As to the proper method of raising a dog from puppyhood, Miss Jones goes on saying: "Most dogs are as stubborn as boys, but Patsy has never given me a bit of trouble. He is as docile as a lamb and I wouldn't take the world for him. He has the feelings of a human being, because once when I stuck him with a pin you ought to hear him howl."

Of course you must gain the confidence of the victim you are trying to bring up. Pet him occasionally, say once or twice an hour, put him to bed and wake him but always kiss him goodnight. (Perhaps some of our readers will wish they could take Patsy's place pro tem upon reading this.)

Never sic your dog onto a cat unless you have no more use for the cat. Wash your dog very often, at least once a year. It is advisable to wear a raincoat when performing this function.

Last but not least never let your dog go away from home. Scold him severely when he commits this misdemeanor and if he persists in disobeying further chastisement is necessary."
