ATHLETIC SPIRIT HIGH IN REGIMENT

General Athletic Development
Stressed by Uni. Military Department

Among the Military department's first interests is that of general athletic development. Physical fitness is essential to effective service, a necessary characteristic of leadership. The initial purpose of instruction in beginning the first year's work, is to cause the student to acquire his "set-up." Both setting-up exercises and drills at attention are in part efforts toward this end. The same idea is in mind when the student is continually cautioned against falling into slouchy postures. Eight per cent of the first year's work is allotted to physical training, and devoted either to setting up exercises or to mass games.

In addition to scheduled physical training, the Military department with a view to furthering general athletic development, encouraging organization spirit, and co-operating with the Athletic Department in uncovering and bringing out new material, has interested itself in developing inter-company competition. The response from men of both advanced and basic courses has been most encouraging. A few companies organized basketball teams, nine companies entered men for the Inter-Company Track Meet, and all were represented in the Baseball tourney. It is planned to add tennis to next year's contests.

Co. "G" (Lantz Captain) was most successful in basket ball. In the Track Meet, May 6th, the same company won with a total of 48 points. Next were Co. "L" (Noh Captain) with 34 1-2 points, Co. "E" (LaTowsky Captain) with 21, and Co. "K" (Hewitt Captain) with 15. Men making greatest number of points were Crites (G), Parks (G), Green (L), Gish (E), and Cozier (E). Co. "E" won the Baseball tourney, defeating Co. "G" in the finals May 17th. A banner has been awarded for each competition.

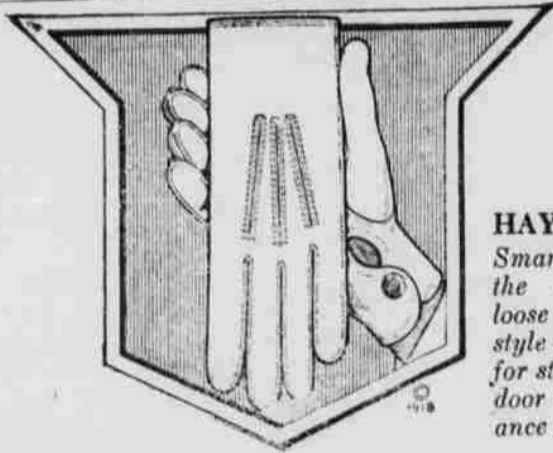

Activities are now being directed toward building up a baseball team from men who are going to camp this summer, with the intention of bringing Ft. Snelling trophies to Nebraska.

KUPPENHEIMER HAS NOTHING ON SUPPLY DEPARTMENT OF R. O. T. C.

Few members of the R. O. T. C. realize the difficulties which confront the supply department of the Cadet corps.

Each September it is necessary to completely equip about twelve hundred students, ranging in altitude from four feet six to six feet four. The House of Kuppenheimer has nothing on us.

At the outset, due to the fact that the average officer or soldier has had no particular training in the art of tailoring (probably because "it takes nine tailors to make a man" and the war department only has authority to employ 150,000 men), some weird and wonderful fits (or misfits) are turned out.

It is a curious thing how helpless the average freshman is in dressing himself in an army uniform, yet how quickly he responds to the spirit of "Beau Brummell" and growls when he sees a fellow cadet with the classic features of the "Arrow Collar" man, whose uniform accentuates his Herculean or Adonis like form. The injured one immediately hies himself to the supply room and demands — note that,—demands a uniform appropriate to his own faultless figure.

The storekeeper looks over the disgruntled one and with a cheery "Don't be down 'earted," notes the stooping shoulders, bowed legs or knock knees — sighs — and does his best.

Seriously, everything is done to satisfy the student, everything to make him look his best. The storekeeper has seen many years service in the quartermaster department of the army and is the personification of that department's slogan, "Service the Cathedral."
