NEWSPAPER HONOR

Not many years ago the press of the country could not be relied upon to tell the truth.

That day and age is past and is gone forever. The ideal of newspaper men today is to get all the news and present it to the reading public in a fair, unbiased manner.

Of course in matters of opinion such as national policies of government, papers will differ in their editorial policies and in their interpretation of economic, social and political conditions and movements.

The press of America is proud of the reputation it has at last attained. However, there is still dishonor among some of the third estate.

The list of Nebraska's beauties with pictures was sent to each of the Omaha papers for release not before Sunday May 28th.

Every person on the Cornhusker staff that knew the names of the beauties had kept it well. They did not want to let the winners be announced until Friday, the day the book was to come before the public.

Their months of secrecy and trouble connected with it were lost because of this breach of faith. Those responsible for this action should not be in the newspaper game.

Contemporary Opinion

A NEW IDEA

Under the title "A New Educational Bill of Fare," the following appears as the first paragraph of an article in the current issue of The Nation:

"The process of education will continue to be what it generally is today a dusty, tiresome discipline, until one important thing happens—until people who are subjected to learning become smitten with a desire to learn. And that will come about only when students attain some control over their studies; when they help compose the bill of fare, not merely eat the food."

worked out a plan for the complete remaking of the curriculum of Barnard—which is nearly identical with that at Columbia—and the result is stimulating to a degree."

The Exhaust

A freshman confesses to having thought that the reason for Ivy Day was to dig all the poison ivy on the campus. But she said she had never seen any. We thought it was the seniors who were uprooted on Ivy Day—of course there's no connection.

Another of our younger friends thought that the idea of the shirt-tail parade was that the last man wore a shirt. But she didn't see the last man!
