A WORK SHIRT MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE

Janitors, fearful of being mistaken for professors, wear work shirts while on duty in university buildings. Such was the secret as revealed by the custodian of one of the large buildings. This man says that if he doesn't wear "Sunday, go to meeting, shirt" some one is liable to come up and take him for a professor. And that would never do, so he wears a work shirt.

To prove his point he tells of an instance when he was wearing a stiff collar and all the fixings. A professor of physics came up and said, "Why, hello, I haven't seen you for years." Recovering from his surprise Mr. Janitor kindly informs the professor that he doesn't know him and never did. Then the professor saw his error and explained that he thought the congenial janitor was a former member of the university faculty.

NEBRASKAN WRITES A POPULAR WALTZ

Rules of the contest follow:

Each voter must have been a member of the student or faculty body of the University of Nebraska during the regular or summer sessions of 1922.

Each voter may vote once on each of the three ballots.

Each ballot must be signed as proof that the voter is entitled to vote.

Each vote will count five points.

Any girl, a student of the university, is eligible to vote no matter what her standing in school.

Character, scholarship and personality should be considered.

BALLOT NO. 1.

I hereby name

as being the most representative girl of the University of Nebraska and the one who should adorn the cover of the waltz song, "The Cornhusker Rose."
