

RENEW DRIVE

FOR STADIUM

our intramural contests can be developed to the point where every student will find it possible and profitable to participate in some physical exercise.

"We want this stadium to be credit to the state and commensurate with the size and dignity of the university. It should seat twenty-five or thirty thousand people. It should be an imposing and substantial structure built for the future as well as for the present. This sort of a stadium will bring the greatest opportunities to our Cornhusker teams and enable them to maintain the standards we demand of them.

Total Cost $400,000

"The total cost of such a structure will be approximately $400,000. This entire amount should be raised within five years but the quicker the money is raised the sooner the stadium will be completed. The total amount should be completely subscribed before actual construction is begun.

"The architects are to be Mr. Elery Davis of Lincoln and Mr. John Latenser, jr., of Omaha, both alumni of the University of Nebraska. These men are donating their services, an act of loyalty which will materially assist in an early realization of the stadium.

"We feel that the above announcement will meet with your unqualified approval and hope that we may have an expression from you assuring us of your continued support.

"Very truly yours,

"HAROLD F. HOLTZ,
stadium chairman,
"GUY E. REED
"R. E. CAMPBELL."

general of Nebraska, won the state doubles championship two successive years.

Eddie Giesen was acknowledged the champion of the university shortly after this. He has always been a strong contender for state honors. In 1918, Giesen won the singles championship at Omaha and with his partner, McKillip of Seward, took the doubles honors. Tennis was not being played officially then, it being a war year, and Giesen was not given the title.

Don Elliott, now of Lincoln, is another contender for state honors. He won the university and the Lincoln city championship in 1921. He and Dean McProud of University Place have yet to decide the city honors for 1922, they having been forced to a draw because of the darkness in the finals a few weeks ago.

Some state contenders are still in the university. Minor Skalberg of Holdrege, a star in present university tennis competition, a holder of a 1922 university tennis "N" is holder of the Southwest Nebraska association championship. He will play with Harry Ellis in the doubles.

Gregg McBride, another university student, assistant sports editor of The Lincoln Star, is a steady consistent player. He was defeated by Elliott in the semi-finals of the Lincoln city tourney, after having defeated Ralph Weaverling. He has reached the finals in the city doubles competition, the match to decide the championship being scheduled for after the state meet.
