College men will distinctly remember the Simon boys as being associated with their father, Mr. Ben Simon in a local clothing firm. In June of the present year Mr. Simon and his three sons bought The Armstrong Clothing Company, and have completely remodeled the store. Many new departments have been added and many changes made for the betterment of the service. The Simons wish it to be emphatically known, among the student body, that they are not connected with any other than The Armstrong Store, where they wish to welcome acquaintances, friends and patrons.

The Wants of the College Man are divided into many classes; but here we have mentioned only the leaders in each class. Merchandise of known quality and acknowledged superiority.
