Buy Tickets Early.

Nebraska student. Are you going to Kansas? Then buy your ticket early. When the tickets go on sale grab them up quick. Make it necessary to send word to Kansas that more seats must be reserved for Nebraska rooters. Show the Jayhawkers that we are going to invade their domain and back up our team.

Do you remember when the Kansas team played on our field, how their rooters crowded into the grandstand? Can't you hear that Kansas chant? The Jayhawkers came in great numbers and their cheers were of great volume.

Show Kansas that Nebraska can send such a delegation to support the team as will be of material help to the "fighting Cornhuskers" who will represent us on the field.

Freshman Night.

The freshmen will have their big night Saturday. They will be subservient to no one. For the All-University party for freshmen will be given in the Armory.

The party is distinctly a freshman event. Upper-classmen will be out-of-place there. A freshman committee has made plans which assure the first-year students a good time.

Freshman spirit is largely dependent upon united class action. It is difficult to secure united class action without being acquainted. The party Saturday evening will serve as a means of acquainting the freshmen with their classmates.

Considering the start which the freshmen have already made in school affairs, and the elaborate plans made by the committees in charge of the party, the party will be one of the outstanding events of the year on the freshman calendar.

Nebraska's Team.

Nebraska students gave the "fighting Cornhuskers" a regular send-off when the team left yesterday afternoon for Oklahoma. Tomorrow at Norman the Nebraska football team will battle for Nebraska against the Oklahoma Sooners.

Few Nebraskaans, other than those connected with the team, could make the long trip to Oklahoma. The number on the side-lines at the game tomorrow cheering for Nebraska will be exceedingly small.

Though the students cannot this time cheer the team while in play they will be behind the team in spirit. The cheers which started the team on the long journey Thursday afternoon showed that the students were backing them, in the Saturday encounter.

Such a send-off as was given the team yesterday means a great deal to the school. It was an opportunity for the display of the crystallized spirit of the University. Everyone in every college united in showing the team, the town, and the world, that Nebraska students are proud of the team.

May the welcome to the returning heroes be even greater than the start.

Navy Day.

Friday, October 27, 1922, has been designated Navy Day. This is at the suggestion of the Navy League of the United States approved by the Navy department.

We are asked to celebrate on Navy Day the consecration to duty of the personnel of the present Navy, the glorious service rendered to the nation by the Navy of the past.

Writing concerning the part played by the navy in the nation's progress. Mr. Henry Grechiridge of the Navy League says: "The Navy rendered vital service to the nation and to humanity during the World War. No great fleet action was fought to give spectacular emphasis to its vital contribution to the victory. But the convoys, the anti-submarine patrol, the mine barrage were essential factors in the winning of the war and the saving of civilization. So it has been in every crisis of our history—the Navy has not failed. Today our peace and prosperity are safeguarded by the Navy. It is an agent of stability in a troubled world. It carries no threat, but it lends authority to America's voice, speaking for altruism, justice and law.

"Those who proposed the celebration of Navy Day, who urge upon you that they believe to be an opportunity of patriotic service, are advocates of peace. They believe in and support the policy of reduction of armaments by agreement but reject as absurd the fatuity of disarmament by example. Living in a world of reality they would foster the instrument of their security while looking forward to the realization of the ideal not yet attained when the only security needed by mankind shall rest in the hearts and minds of men and nations."

Campus Comment.

Personality Plus.

At Northwestern university they are instituting a course in the improvement of personality, which every student will be encouraged to take.

As to whether personality is a thing which can be dealt with successfully in the classroom, much difference of opinion exists. The authorities at Northwestern are apparently certain that the course will be of great benefit to students.

Personality is more or less an abstract thing, which can quickly be discerned in persons who possess it, but which is more or less difficult to analyze. Many people believe that his personal quality is born into an individual and rarely acquired through instruction. Few would deny, however, that personality can be developed immeasurably through proper association with persons of natural magnetic qualities.

The claim is advanced that the course should show many students how to improve their personal appearance, their dress, and their manners. If it does this, no doubt a real aim will be served. A considerable number of students which could be corrected to advantage. Often their friends notice these deficiencies, but dare not mention them, fearing that they might be misunderstood. If an expert along these lines were to inform them of these deficiencies they would probably not be offended, and might correct habits which if allowed to continue would be a serious detriment to them in later life.

There are certain elements in an individual's personality which could not profitably be tampered with. But nevertheless, an idea such as this which is successful will add considerably to the polish of university graduates, is worth experiment.—Michigan Daily.

Do You Ride a Hobby, Or Let it Ride You?

It is quite right to have a hobby, but do not be so engrossed in it that you cannot talk on any other subject.

The members of your family would like to hear a change in the conversation occasionally.

Each member of the family likes to talk, remember, and they want to discuss different subjects, not the same old subject evening after evening.

And parents—give your children a chance to talk.

Encourage the youngsters to think, correcting their speech carefully, but not too obtrusively, as they express their thought to you and to others.

Become interested in their school work.

Ask them about their work in school—what they have done during the day.

In this way you can get an idea what they like, and had out what they have learned, and what they are supposed to have learned, each day.

If you make a practice of questioning your children on the subjects they carry, and what is brought out at each lesson, you will encourage them to pay strict attention to their lessons, so that they can tell you about them.

It is this spirit of helpfulness and interest which makes school life easier for the kiddies, and you might learn a few things yourself.—The Lincoln Star.

DEFENDS TEACHING MODERN LANGUAGES IN HIGH SCHOOL

If struggling for an existence gives strength and vitality, the study of the modern languages should be destined to a long and prosperous life, Miss Mabel Pollard, of the Plattsmouth high school faculty, told teachers assembled in the second district Nebraska State Teachers association convention.

Beginning with the time when the Greek began to lose its prestige, educators aligned themselves on two sides—those attacking and those defending the study of languages, declared the speaker. Later she said, the attack shifted to Latin and more recently to French and Spanish. Even though most schools have retained at least one modern language in their curriculum, these attacks have not ceased according to Miss Pollard.

The Plattsmouth educator defended the place of modern languages in the school curriculum by pointing out their advantages in cultures. She cited that pursuit of modern languages lends assistance to study in general, making of pupils true students; that study of modern language makes people more sympathetic toward the peoples that use those old languages as their native tongue. She touched upon the relation which the modern languages bear to other subjects taught in the schools. In the study of English, knowledge of modern languages justifies its existence in that the student by his knowledge of other languages, finds himself better able to understand English grammar, according to Miss Pollard. The student's vision is broader and he is able to learn from the language of other countries many things which his understanding of the English has not taught him.

"There is a definite place for the modern languages in our curriculum—justified in part by the practical values and their relationship to other subjects; but largely justified by the cultural value, that something which we feel, but find difficulty in expressing," asserted the speaker in conclusion.—The Lincoln Star.

NEBRASKA LAGS IN HEALTH WORK SAYS MRS. WESTERMANN

"Nebraska stands at the foot in all health work," says Mrs. Max Westermann, home nursing teacher, who is just back from the Mississippi valley conference for tuberculosis, at Milwaukee held October 9, 10 and 11.

Mrs. Westermann, a member of the advisory council for the Mississippi conference on tuberculosis, returned last week with many new ideas.

"One out of every ten persons of high school age," said Mrs. Westermann, "has tuberculosis in an active form, and until we build up the physical side of the students by giving them plenty of fresh air, sunshine, recreation and wholesome food, we are taking a step backward instead of a step forward. What made me feel worst of all," continued Mrs. Westermann, "is the fact that Nebraska was voted by the conference as being the last of all the states in all works for promoting health."

The conference, one day was devoted to discussing the best way of selling Christmas seals for the purpose of stamping out tuberculosis.

The annual freshman-sophomore cross-country meet will take place tomorrow, beginning at 1:30 in the afternoon, the start to be made from the grandstand on New Beaver Field, and the runners to follow the usual course.

It would not be at all surprising to see the freshmen win tomorrow's contest, as many of the new men are fulfilling Coach Martin's hopes, expressed at the beginning of the season, that the class of 1926 will produce some brilliant runners. Of the yearling distance men, Shipley and Arm show the best form at present.

A search for the famous lost battalion, and its equally lost press agent, Sgt. J. J. Martine, was instituted in Lincoln Wednesday morning, following the arrival in the city of Special Agent Hannah of the department of justice from Washington, D. C., who has been detailed for a thorough investigation of the case at the instance of the war department.

Mr. Hannah Wednesday morning called on Chief of Police Peter Johnstone and obtained photographic copies of the checks that Martine passed in Lincoln October 2, drawn on First National bank. The various victims of the bogus army sergeant were also interviewed by the secret service operator.

The special agent's visit to Lincoln is largely due to the communication sent to the war department on October 5, by Chief Johnstone, the chief recently received a letter from the war department, signed by the adjutant general informing him that there was no such name on the roll of Co. A, 18th Infantry, First division, and that in fact there never was a soldier in the American army by the name of J. J. Martine.

Chief Johnstone declared his belief Wednesday morning that the department of justice agent's investigation would undoubtedly establish a connection between Sergeant Martine and the man who was reported to have operated at Independence, Kan., and other points, as a Princess Pat survivor.

tion of the Argonne, who came to Lincoln about a month ago and caused a stir by announcing that the famous organization would appear in Lincoln on Monday, Oct. 2, for exhibition drills on the campus of the university. He spoke at various theatres, petitioned the city council for a permit to parade the battalion on O street, placed orders for coal with the coal dealers, for the field kitchens of the battalion, and then made arrangements with restaurant owners to serve fifty soldiers each, making his getaway after cashing a lot of worthless checks. No trace of him has been found since he left Lincoln, and the lost battalion which was reported as coming to Lincoln in army trucks from Des Moines, is still on the road as far as Lincoln is concerned.
