University students will have the privilege next week to hear the two candidates for governor of Nebraska. Chancellor Avery issued invitations to the two rival candidates early in the year for them to appear before the university convocation.

The opportunity to hear both of the leading candidates for governor is not afforded to all of the voters. Every student voter should attend the convocations in order to become acquainted with the candidates and the fundamental issues of the election.

The designation of men for governmental positions is not only a privilege but a duty in an intelligent democracy. The best men obtainable should be selected by the people. The choice should be made with care.

A Dad's Day for Nebraska is an innovation which should become a permanent tradition. Announcement is made today that the first Dad's Day will be held on November 18, the day of the Kansas Aggie game. If this day proves to be the success, which is anticipated, it will be a reason for establishing the day as a tradition.

That the fathers like football there is little question. Nebraska has a famous team this year. The Dads would find attendance at a Nebraska game thoroughly enjoyable.

As well as bringing the Dads to Lincoln to see Nebraska's team in action the day will be a chance to show Dad the life at school.

The idea of Dads' Day has been tried in a number of schools and has been found highly successful.

The date set is close to Thanksgiving, a holiday which the students have been accustomed to spend at home. This year, according to the revised vacation plan adopted by the vote of the student body last year, there will not be the usual long recess. Few students will be able to go home. A visit from dad less than two weeks before the holiday should help to make up for this lack.

It is not too early to write to Dad now and invite him to come to the University for the first Dads' Day. The earlier he is invited the easier it will be for him to make plans to spend November 18 at Nebraska.

Our College daily should be a mirror reflecting the life of the University. We do not want it to be a defective mirror. It will be more or less defective in proportion to the way in which it reflects the life of the whole school. This is a large University. The mirror may not be able to reflect everything at once. But it should reflect that which the school is most interested in and that which is adding to the glory of the school.

There is an efficient staff of reporters attempting to collect the news of the school. They need the help and co-operation of those in command who can give them the information, whether they be professors or students. Every person in this community should feel a responsibility for giving to the school paper.

Again, if there is something in the school life which you think this mirror of college events is neglecting a direction in which the mirror is never turned or when it is the picture it reflects is out of shape like those convex and concave mirrors which distort the human form let us know about it. We are ready to try to reflect the life of the school in the best way possible. We will welcome suggestions.

Campus Comment.

To the Editor: "The true method in education has as its ultimate and highest aim the building of individual character, revealing to the individual all his powers and capacities and making him master and director of them. What does not result in this supreme end is not education, whatever text books and apparatus may be used in acquiring it—however many years may be spent upon it. Innate strength of mind is evidenced by trained power to attend, to observe, to concentrate effort, to gain general concepts, and draw correct conclusions; and to express them in some manner with readiness and accuracy."

If an education does not fulfill its three-fold aim—physical, mental and spiritual, it has failed in its purpose; and what can better contribute toward the spiritual development than the Y. W. C. A. with its fine standards and high ideals, its ability to train girls for leadership in the highest sense? On the same principle that learning should be as widely diffused as possible, so also should the traits of leadership and adaptability—in short, being able to meet people on common footing to get along with them, to be of help to them, if need be—when occasion demands. The University pastors alone cannot carry out this work. It requires an organization non-sectarian in character, big enough and broad enough to take in every type of personality.

The statement that such an organization "proposes so much and performs so little" may have some element of truth, but it is questionable just how accurate a measure of its accomplishments can be. What organization ever does accomplish all that it proposes? "A man's reach must exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" You cannot hope to gain more from any thing than you take to it in the first place. It is not because of the frailty of mankind and the unwillingness of people to make real sacrifices that any project fails in its purpose?

There seems to be some misunderstanding concerning the organization of the W. S. G. A. The proctors constitute the council of the W. S. G. A. so to abolish it is to abolish the council. Since this council meets regularly but once a month, it does not appear that the amount of time required of each member is a severe strain on her limited number of hours. When it is realized that through these monthly meetings a fine spirit of co-operation between students and University authorities is developed and the work of the Dean of Women made more effective, it would appear that there is some justification for their occurrence.

To say that the W. S. G. A. and Y. W. C. A. are responsible for low scholarship is a sweeping statement, and should indeed call for some careful consideration. It will be remembered that the people on the campus who were most active in Y. W. and for that matter, in other organizations, represented at the same time a large portion of the honor students. These people were not letting their scholarship suffer because of their activities. They were able to co-ordinate the two and strike a balance between them. And because they were able to meet the duties and responsibilities which will be presently thrust upon them, in the busy world of affairs outside the radius of the campus, scholarship alone, does not count. It is rather one's ability to meet people and cope with difficult situations wisely.

Few people when they first enter college realize what are the essential things to strive for. There is no better organization than the Y. W. C. A. to furnish the standards and ideals to which everyone should aspire. And if one price of learning just these things is being made to go to Y. W. then indeed should everyone be required to go.

If the question might now be asked of every girl graduate who once took an active part in school activities, what organization meant the most to her in after life as she looked back upon her school career—it would not be a bold assumption to reply that her answer would be "The Y. W. C. A."

IF I HAD TIME!

If I had time to find a place,
And sit me down full face to face
With my better self that cannot show
My daily life that rushes so,
It might be then I would see my soul
Was stumbling still toward the shining goal,
I might be nerved by the thought sublime,
If I had time!

Get the Pen that Fills by a Press of the Button

A Filler That's Not Exposed So Can't Catch and Spill Ink

THIS is one of the vital reasons why the Parker Pen ranks highest with America's educators and student bodies. Its filler is "safety-sealed" beneath the neat screw-cap end. There's no exposed lever to catch on the clothing, spill ink and spoil your suit or blouse. Remove the cap, immerse the pen in ink, press the button and the Parker is filled.

This simple, perfect filler was created by Geo. S. Parker, inventor of the celebrated leakproof "Lucky-Curve" feed. And in no other pen can you obtain these features—so important, so important if a pen is to perform without a hitch. And that's what you want in a fountain pen—not one that distracts your mind when you're trying to concentrate on study or class instruction.

All Parker pens are 14K rolled gold, so they can't rust, corrode or tarnish and are not affected by acids.

Prices range from $2.50 upward according to style and mounting. These pens are made with the same mechanical perfection and jewelers' accuracy and finish found in the famous Parker 25-year Duofold—the lacquer-red pen at $7 that has taken America by storm.

Come pick out the point that best suits your hand—extra fine, fine, medium, coarse or stub. We'll give you a Parker Accident Policy free—insuring you for one year against any breakage, damage satisfactory service of any kind.
