Voters and Citizens.

There are some things that are always expected of the college student by the members of his home community. They may not know what he is studying at college, or what he is preparing to do with himself later on, but they do believe that he is developing an intelligence in a general as well as in a specialized way. They expect that he will become an active and interested member of the community in which he claims his home, and that he will have learned to be a good citizen.

It is very natural then, that every community expects its absent student voters to take advantage of absent voters privileges. Voting at elections for officers of state and county is a very important function, and intelligent voting is an expression of good citizenship. If they fail to grasp opportunities in the present, they will be a disappointment to those who have measured their capabilities and felt them big and broad.

It may also cause disappointment in the school if its students fail to vote, for it may be believed that the school is failing in its greatest aim—that of turning out good citizens.

Take Your Turn.

A "Rag-picker" who stands in line to get his paper is almost better than a subscriber with so much nerve he butts in ahead of everybody else and gets his paper. Indeed he is almost preferred. But this school does not want either and it should not have either.

If you are the kind that stands in line to get your paper you know yourself how many times you would have liked to express your opinion of some fellow or girl who so daintily stepped ahead of the line, and picked off a paper and made away with it. Doesn't it make your blood boil? You know it does, and it seems that the only way in which the evil can be stopped is to notify these nifty persons that there is a line which they can join (at the end), and that they should stay there until their right and proper turn should come. Of course, if this method does not produce the required results, and organization could be formed to enforce the ruling like the Iron Sphinx forced the wearing of green caps by the Freshmen.

The best thing, however, is for these ungrateful persons to desist from their sports, and act sportsmanlike. Then no pent up emotions against these outrages will break out on your friends and make them think you are ill-natured and sulky. So let all of us get together, and play the game square. Get in line if you want a "Rag."

I-O Way.

The old football oligarchy of the East that ruled well might supreme some twenty years back has been crumbling for a long time, and still is crumbling. Here are these "Hawk-eyes" from Iowa City coming into the classic football shades of New Haven and standing the "Bull-dog" on his head. There have been others of these challengers from the outlands and year by year they seem to grow a little stronger and more threatening. There was Centre and Chicago and Nebraska last year. This fall Kansas comes East, and the Army sends the "Jayhawk" back with defeat stenciled on his features. Then Drake university, out in Iowa, rises up Saturday and takes the edge off the Army victory by thrashing the "Jayhawk" again. Of a certainty the football capital of these United States is a wandering one. It is no longer nailed down east of the Alleghenies, as it used to be in the comfortable olden time, when a half-dozen big Eastern teams held the spotlight year after year and ruled the Gridiron Empire unchallenged. However, it still is the ambition of every good team in the country to beat Yale or Harvard or Princeton and the others of the great teams whose shadow once fell so far across the autumn fields. Therefore, "I-o-way" is happy. It is something, after all, to have come out of Iowa City and rubbed the "Bulldog's" nose in the dust of his own field.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Campus Comment.

To the Daily Nebraskan:
One of the chief means of promotion of University social activities, as a whole, is the Mixer, or All-University party. I believe that thus far this has been to a great extent a failure, at least from the student's point of view. I do not stand alone in this opinion, as it seems to be generally thought by the student body that the Mixer has failed to accomplish its purpose.

The object of the Mixer is to bring the students together and, by taking advantage of the informality of the occasion, to enable them to make acquaintances and create friendships which will make more pleasant every phase of University life. To do this it is necessary that the Mixer have the united support of the student body, something that so far it has failed to gain. At the present time many students attend the Mixer only as a last resort, when they have no other place to go. That is not the spirit that will make the Mixer the success it should be, and allow it to fulfill its purpose.

It is not my intention to devise ways and means for making the Mixer a success. That is up to the management, whoever it may be, and if the present management is unable to cope successfully with the situation, then let some all-student organization take charge of the Mixer.

The Mixer must be conducted in such a way that the students will look forward to it and will attend it with the assurance that they will enjoy the occasion. If the cut and dried program of games, stunts and dancing fails to answer the purpose, something else must be substituted, for those of the above that have proven unpopular with the students. Verily, pleasing everyone is a difficult task, and yet a majority must be pleased if the Mixer is to do its work. This, I repeat, is the problem for the management; it is my purpose merely to point out the fact that thus far the students have considered the Mixer very largely a failure.
RAYMOND D. WOOD.

Contemporary Opinion

Friday Night.

What part of the week does the college student look forward to from week to week? What time during the week do his thoughts most frequently return to after he has left school and gone out into the world?

Is it the 30-clocks which he has every Monday morning? Is it the Friday morning quizzes that came with the regularity of the sun? Is it Monday night, when he was forced to sit through a tiresome fraternity meeting, listening to the brothers argue about everything under the sun?

No, there is one time in the week upon which all attention of the undergraduate is focussed and back to which the memory of every alumnus wanders as the brightest spot in the week. That time is Friday night.

Friday night! What memories that recalled fraternity and sorority dances, football rallies, restaurants crowded with students cheering and "lining for the sheer joy of it, the sophomore football dance, the Junior Prom, formal with their flowers and borrowed dress suits, parties at Ketch's and on and on.

Just mention Friday night to the college man, graduate or undergraduate, and you have opened the flood of reminiscence, the flow of which you will have a hard time damming. It is the time when college gaiety is at its highest and about it centers all social activities of the week.

Study we may and work we may, but it is to the Friday nights, when we play, that our thoughts always return when we look back over our college life.—Ogle State Lantern.

Irwin Declares That Continued War Will Destroy White Race

After tracing the development of warfare from the days of the Egyptian up to and including the war of 1914, Will Irwin, internationally known as a war correspondent, declared in State gym Friday afternoon that unless we get rid of war, the white race will become a set of weakened in the ruins of their civilization.

In this tracing, he declared that the use of airplanes, deadly gases, and civilians as fair game for the enemy were outstanding developments.

In speaking of the attempts which have been made to end war, Mr. Irwin referred to the spirit of the human race and said, "It feels before it formulates."

"The year of 1914 was preceded by an abnormal state in history. It was a century of intense antagonism when men were more than ever before conscious of their nationality."
