PICTURES TAKEN OF CORNERSTONE LAYING

Conservation and Survey Department Take "Movies" of Armistice Day

At the request of Governor McKelvie, the Conservation and Survey Division of the University took motion pictures showing all the details of laying the cornerstone of the new state capitol last Saturday. The film is now being run at the Rialto theater.

The photographic department of the University will take close-up motion pictures of the football players today. The pictures will be shown at the banquet the Kiwanis Club is giving for the players.

Mr. Frank Hays of the United States Bureau of Soils and the soil survey department of the University is in Merrick county checking up the work of the summer. He will return as soon as the field work there is finished.

Mr. L. S. Payne of the United States Bureau of Soils and of the soil survey department of the University, and his party have just finished a detailed survey of Cuming county. They will come to University in a few days to finish preparation of the report on areas.

Mr. U. G. Cornell of the photographic department, on a recent trip to the northern part of the state, took considerable footage and about 200 still pictures showing the resources and industries of that region.

Mr. V. W. Russon of the geology department of the University is now in Harlan county working out a detailed geological survey of the Republican Valley.

crete, crystallized sort of spirit that it would be well for us to emulate. Their spirit is not built on victory, but on a deep love for their University. But our football team is better than theirs, I believe our morale is better than theirs, and all you fellows push this thing and everything else like it and make us all better," apostrophized Coach Dawson in speaking to men's campus organizations at a meeting to promote Dad's Day plans last night in the Temple theater.

"Do something if you go to college. Don't sidestep and let someone else do it—each one must individually dig in and produce. We don't seem to have realized yet the worthwhileness of very man doing his part in a job like Dad's Day, whether he is known or unknown. This is just a beginning. There will be many other projects like this, and we must work to make them all successful," said the dean of men.

"This is an informal feed—cafeteria style—and a smoker just for dads and their sons. We are somewhat handicapped this year because the Army will accommodate only 1,000 men—500 sons and their fathers," said George Smaha, Varsity, who presided. "The military department is having its annual carnival that night, and it has consented to suspend work from 12 to 2 o'clock for the luncheon. Most of the decorations will be up."

Two dance orchestras and the University quartet will furnish music. Governor McKelvie, Chancellor Avery and others are to speak.

Tickets go on sale today, and will be sold only to men whose fathers are coming to Lincoln for Dad's day, until Thursday. The tickets are being sold by colleges. College chairmen are to check in at the Awgwan office Thursday from 4 to 6 o'clock, and if the required number have not been sold, all University men may secure single admissions—50 cents—Friday.

"Jiggs" and Wife Attend Michigan

At last "Jiggs" and "Maggie" have come to college. Those who watch carefully the doings of these funny people will be glad to know that to gain their much needed education they have come to Michigan.

They have been seen officially by a reporter in a journalism class. When communication on the subject was taken up with McManus, their boss, he expressed no fear that they would lose some of their humor after attending college. He also made the statement that he approved heartily of their choice of journalism as a course inasmuch as they have so much newspaper work in real life.

These two comic characters have the same luck that is theirs in the papers when they escape alive after their fights, for in class they are never called on. The instructor does not even know that they are present every day on the cover of a student's notebook.—Michigan Daily.

visory committee to work with the Bureau of Mines and act as its chairman. He selected a committee as follows: Dr. F. G. Cottrell, director of fixed nitrogen research laboratory; Professor W. L. DeBaufre, chairman of the Department of Engineering of the University of Nebraska; Dr. D. O. Lyman, chief metallurgist of the Bureau; Dr. R. B. Moore, chief chemist of the Bureau of Mines; R. C. Tolman, professor of physical chemistry and mathematical physics at the California Institute of Technology; J. W. Davis, Metallurgist of the Bureau; Frank Hodson, president of the Electrical Furnace Construction Company, and P. J. Royster, assistant metallurgist of the Bureau.

Previous to the war, some work was done in Belgium on enrichment of blast with oxygen in connection with the smelting of iron ores in furnaces. In the United States, the late J. E. Johnson, Jr., was interested in the possible use of oxygen in metallurgical operations and carried on some experimental work along these lines previous to his death.

pressions. Surprise that the school whose 1921 squad was so thoroughly wrecked could produce another winner in such a short time was mingled with a consciousness that it might have been expected—that for some reason football flourished at Notre Dame. The colorful teams of Indiana school have darted into all sections of the country, grasped swift victories by employing the newest and the spectacular brand of football and then have departed as swiftly as they came, always leaving a welcome behind. For years Notre Dame has done this thing; few schools in the country can boast of the uniformly successful eleven which represented Notre Dame. Something essential to football is interred at Notre Dame—something more powerful than the mere loss of a squad of stars.

It is not our object to investigate the causes of athletic success at Notre Dame but rather to present the men who have figured in the football triumphs of the school.

Football has been a sport at Notre Dame for 33 years during which time the "Fighting Irish," as the teams are known, have won 187 games, lost 38 and tied 8. The first seven teams won 12 games and lost six without the services of a coach. In 1896, Frank E. Hering of South Bend, captain and coach. From the eleven of Hering until the present, eleven coaches have handled Notre Dame teams. The last, and gradually being recognized as the greatest football teacher in the land, is Knute Rockne.

The 33 years of Notre Dame football divides naturally into two periods. The first period of 17 years witnessed 65 victories and 25 defeats. The second period of 16 years, beginning in 1906 with the advent of Red Miller and his associates, is the period of glory which ran higher each succeeding year. In these latest 16 years the teams of Notre Dame have won 119 contests, tied four and lost but ten. Seven of the 33 teams in the history of the school went through the season without having a score registered against them.

The record of Rockne is peculiarly bright. The present coach played end at Notre Dame in 1911, 1912 and 1913—during these years Notre Dame won 20 games and lost none and defeated such teams as Pittsburgh, Penn State and West Point. Rockne captained the 1913 team which walked Penn State 14-7 and, in a now famous game in which Rockne and Dorais introduced the forward pass to the east, won from the Army, 35-13.

Since he became head coach at Notre Dame, the teams of Rockne have won 45 games and lost but two. Nebraska, West Point, Indiana and Purdue have been victims for three consecutive years and Georgia Tech and W. & J. have fallen once. Only Iowa and Michigan Aggies have lowered the colors of Rockne-coached teams—and both defeats have been traced to over-confidence.

Except for startling figures like Red Salmon and Red Miller, the average Notre Dame fan knows little of the history of the past—when football was a brute and beef was king. Knowledge of Notre Dame coaches is confined to Jesse Harper and Knute Rockne—Notre Dame Scholastic.

IPSE DIXIT and GALILEO

There was much learning but little real knowledge in Galileo's time (1564-1642). Aristotle was swallowed in bad Latin translations. Iperse dixit. No one checked him by what seemed vulgar, coarse experiment.

Galileo fought against the dead hand of tradition. He did not argue about Aristotle, but put him to the test. Aristotle led his readers to believe that of two bodies the heavier will fall the faster. Galileo simply climbed to the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa and dropped two unequal weights. The "best people" were horrified; they even refused to believe the result—that the weights reached the ground in equal times.

"Look at the world, and experiment, experiment," cried Galileo.

The biggest man in the 16th century was not Galileo in popular estimation, but Suleiman the Magnificent, the Ottoman Emperor, who swept through Eastern Europe with fire and sword and almost captured Vienna. Where is his magnificence now?

Galileo gave us science—established the paramount right of experimental evidence. Suleiman did little to help the world.

Hardly an experiment is made in modern science, which does not apply Galileo's results. When, for instance, the physicists in the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company study the motions of electrons in rarified atmospheres, or experiment to heighten the efficiency of generators and motors, they follow Galileo's example and substitute facts for beliefs.
