CYCLONES READY FOR THE HUSKERS

Ames Warriors Intent on Putting up a Big Fight in Face of Valley Champions

(Special to the Nebraskan)
Ames, Nov. 20.—During the past week the Cyclone gridmen have been preparing for the Cornhusker battle which is the last event on the Ames football schedule this fall.

After playing the last three Missouri Valley games on their schedule, Ames will have bucked up against the three schools now standing at the head of the Valley column: Drake, which has won three games, the Kansas Aggies, who have won as many but have tied two, and the Cornhuskers, who stand at the top of the list by virtue of their winning over the Jayhawkers with a larger count than did the Bulldogs.

Altho it was hard to judge the merits of either team in the Ames-Kansas Aggie game, it was thought by the Ames constants that the Aggies had a stronger organization than the Bulldog eleven which two weeks ago claimed first place on the percentage column since they had won more games without losing or tying any than any other Valley team. But Coach Sam Willaman is expecting the Nebraska tussle to be the hardest of the season.

The Cyclone squad, which began this season with an exceptionally green organization since there were only three of last year's lettermen on the team, has been improving with every game. Although in the last two games they have come out the short end of the horn, the coaches feel that the team will be playing their best at Lincoln.

Snyder, who broke two ribs in the Drake game, is the only regular on the Ames team who will not be able to play this week.

Captain Walters, who tore the ligament in his hand in the game with the Bulldogs, did not play in the Kansas Aggie game and it is expected that he will not be in condition much before the team goes to Nebraska.

In the Drake game the Cyclones' pass offensive was superior to that of the Bulldogs, and in the last few minutes, with a series of three passes, the ball was carried almost the full length of the field within eight yards of the Drake goal line. It is expected that the Ames men will try to improve this phase of their game during the next week.

Cornhuskers Beware!

"Cornhuskers, beware!" That's the warning friends of Nebraska "down east" have issued. "Anybody who tells you Notre Dame hasn't a chance to win on Turkey day when they clash with the Cornhuskers at Lincoln—who tells you that the South Bend Irish are badly crippled—who tells you they have a weak line and a weak offensive—either doesn't know what he's talking about or else he's trying to inspire in you false confidence!"

That's the "dope" as it stands today. Stories are going the rounds to the effect that Nebraska will walk away with the Irishers.

Cornhusker supporters in Omaha and Lincoln are freely offering as high as three to one on Nebraska. They point to the Huskers' 28 to 0 win over Kansas, while the Army was able to beat the Jayhawks only 14 to 0, and the Army and Notre Dame played a scoreless tie.

But ex-Nebraska students, who have been watching the Notre Dame team in action this year, contradict such rumors absolutely.

Gur Desch, world's champion 440-yard hurdler, and star halfback on the Notre Dame eleven, is out of the game for the rest of the season, says one of the alleged "fake" rumors.

Lieb, powerful tackle, is also out for the season, says another report.

But a Notre Dame student, recently, in a letter to an Omaha friend, said:

"Yes, Desch is out of the game—with a sore heel—but he's only out of the game until Thanksgiving day. He'll be in the lineup against Nebraska, and if the Cornhuskers have an end, or even two ends or a whole flock of ends, who can stop this jackrabbit, they're welcome to the game.

"Lieb, too, will be back in the harness by Thanksgiving day," the letter continues. "Neither Lieb nor Desch will be in a suit until Turkey day. But they'll both play against Nebraska."

"This is just one of the surprises Rockne and staff have stored up for Nebraska."

"More than fifteen trick plays, seven of them evolving around the brilliant Desch, have been practiced nightly by the team all season, and not one of them will be sprung until the team takes the field against Nebraska."

"Rockne intends to beat Nebraska."—Omaha Daily News.

'Mud' Gardner Not Delinquent for the Harrier Contest

"Mud" Gardner, one of the men on the Nebraska cross country team, is not delinquent in his subjects, and is not disqualified in his race of Saturday. This means that the race was won by Nebraska, score 29 to 26.

After the men came in during the halves of the game Saturday, a report was given out that Nebraska did not win because Gardner was not eligible. At the same time, the Nebraska men were accused of helping one of their men on the finish. The truth of the matter is that the three men finishing second did not lock their arms until they had entered the gate, and did not do it at that time to assist, but as more or less of a form which has been done at other meets.

Nebraska and Drake Leaders in Valley

But two teams remain in the category of the undefeated after the last whistle blew Saturday afternoon. Nebraska and Drake are still boasting perfect percentages in the column of averages.

But few conference games were played last week, the Nebraska-Kansas Aggie and Missouri-Washington battles being the only inter-conference battles. The Huskers dethroned the Farmers while the other two teams fought for the pleasure of the battle. Drake has not been playing big games and has retained her position by playing many non-conference games. Although the Bulldogs have a strong combination they are not playing the brand of football that the Huskers have shown.

Thanksgiving will probably find the Bulldogs and the Huskers leading, with the Aggies a close second. Missouri has dropped far down the list, while several of the smaller colleges are fighting for the cellar position. K. U. has been playing a big league type of football and deserve a position near the top of the column.

The averages stand:

	G.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
Nebraska	4	4	0	0	1000
Drake	4	4	0	0	1000
Kansas Aggies	6	3	1	2	.750
Missouri	* 3	3	0	.500
Ames	5	3	0	.400
Kansas	4	1	2	.333
Oklahoma	4	1	2	.333
Grinnell	4	1	3	.250
Washington	5	0	5	.000

NOTRE DAME CLAIMS LOSS OF GRID STAR

Absence of Preston for Nebraska Balanced by Claim That Castner Will be Out

Nebraska's loss of Glen Preston was duplicated in the Notre Dame camp when Paul Castner, their star full back, received injuries that will keep him out of the game the rest of the season. Castner was the nucleus around which Coach Rockne built his running-kicking-passing combination.

Not unlike Preston, Castner has starred in every game. He was as great a player as the famous George Gipp. He was one of those men that Rockne turns out every few years and Nebraska stock should jump as a result of the blow to the Notre Dame team. The injuries will slow up the promised quality of the Notre Dame-Nebraska classic but both coaches are trying their various men to fill the positions left vacant by the decrease of fate.

This is the second major injury that the South Benders have suffered, Tom Lieb breaking his leg in an early-season game. Coach Rockne managed to fill the position left vacant by Lieb, but the time is too short and the position too big to fill before the final whistle blows on the Lincoln classic.

To Hold Fraternity Cross-Country Meet

The inter-fraternity cross country run for this year will be held the second Saturday after Thanksgiving. The short course, commonly known as the Fraternity course, with the distance of three miles, will be run. The coach hopes that each frat will be represented. Last year there were only five fraternities that entered the race, but McMaster believes that more enthusiasm will be shown this year. Also he says, "Since the course to be run is the short one, if the men get out now and start practicing, a good race should be forthcoming at that time."

Coach McMaster desires all the fraternities to get their men out practicing now, and to hand in a list of entrants to the Student Activities office as soon as possible.

Men Rob Co-eds of Powder Puffs at Party

Powder puffs nesting close to dirty handkerchiefs in the pockets of men's clothing are brought to light by the proprietors of local cleaning and pressing establishments. It is not known whether the male sex has become more vain or has developed into a class of thieves which robs co-eds of the prized articles for removing the abhorred shine from their noses.

One proprietor states that men are more careless about leaving belongings in their pockets than women. They often find money, keys, letters, bills, checks and gloves, sometimes feminine ones. More handkerchiefs than anything else are found, some large dirty ones which are promptly thrown away, and some small dainty ones which the cleaners do not bother because of fond memories undoubtedly clinging to them. Masculine articles are not found in the pockets of the co-eds, however.—Indiana Daily Student.

Theaters

Modernity is emblazoned through the story of Petrova's new play, "The White Peacock," which comes to the Orpheum Tuesday with Petrova, authoress, actress, linguist herself in the leading role.

Petrova's play begins where "Nora" slams the door, with the decision of the intelligent modern woman to live her own life, yet allowing the dictates of heart and brain to be her justification. Instead of treating her subject scientifically Petrova has delved deep into the Romanist school. "By Isben out of Hugo" is the adroit way in which her play has been described; for not only it is a piece of sound dramatic literature, but it is colored with all the sensuous loveliness of Spain. There is the song of the palpitant lover in a wailing minor key, the heavy aroma of orange trees, nightingales and moonlight and the rich purple of semi-tropical bouganvilleas. In the midst of this appealing setting steps forth the stately beautiful Revette, portrayed by Petrova herself, in her matchless manner. Revette di Riberay Sentilles is the wife of the aspiring Don Miguel, a Spanish dignitary whose unfaithful love she refuses to accept. Being an artist, she is able to live independently and, although Don Miguel threatens her, she refuses to return home, and she even turns a deaf ear to the Spanish law, which would compel her to do so.

Don Caesar di Mendosa Y Consales, and escaped convict, convicted unjustly of the murder of his father when Don Miguel was chief justice, comes to Revette's studio in the dead of night seeking revenge. Instead of murdering Revette, he falls in love with her and at the request becomes her model. Don Miguel, recognizes him and from this point complications ensue, making three tense acts of suspense, revelling the interest to the very last moment. The love scenes in the play are particularly captivating, often veering on tragedy, but terminating at the wished for finale. In the supporting cast will be seen artists such as Mitchell Harris, Robert Brister, H. H. McCullum, Messenger Bellis, Judson Langill, Ludilla Toretan, Doris Carpenter, Letha Walter and Nicholas Nelson.

Gov. Sweet Believes In Social Research
An educational campaign for better understanding of political and economic problems in which the University of Colorado and the other colleges would be great factors is the dream of William E. Sweet as he goes into the governor's chair, according to a recent interview.

It is Sweet's idea to make the colleges of the land—great powers in the political education of America is Oxford in England. He cites the position of the University of Wisconsin, where, he says, much of the good legislation which has been put into law in that state originated.

"I do not mean by this," he said, "that theory is to take the place of experience in industrial legislation, but I do believe that what is known as the intellectual group has much to contribute to the subject. I am sure that there is some part which our colleges and state university can play in promoting social and industrial legislation."

Classes under trained professors, Mr. Sweet believes, can study social and industrial problems and make suggestions to be considered by groups of business men, politicians, and others. While not committed to that policy, he hopes to see its consummation.—Colorado Silver and Gold.

Scotland Yard Expert To Speak Wednesday
"My Experiences in Scotland Yard" will be the topic of Sir Basil Thomson's lecture Wednesday night, November 15, at Hill auditorium under the auspices of the Oratorical association. This lecture is the fourth of the numbers of the association this season and promises to be one of the most interesting. Scotland Yard is the headquarters of the famous British police system. In this department are found many of the world's authorities on crimes and criminals.

As head of the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard, Sir Basil has had many mysteries to unravel. Particularly during the war he was especially active in leading the apprehension of many of the host of spies which then infested England. During this time he uncovered an extensive plot to assassinate simultaneously most of the allied war leaders.

Perhaps his most spectacular case was that of the final discovery of the poisoned pen writer. He found in examining the missives written that there were seventeen misspelled words. Drawing inferences from this evidence, together with the police reports, within two hours he had come to a definite solution of the problem and the criminal was imprisoned.—The Michigan Daily.

LAWYERS AND DENTS MEET WEDNESDAY

Bowling Teams From Two Colleges Will Roll Games on Lincoln Alleys

The bowling match scheduled by the Law College and the Dental College teams will be rolled on the Lincoln Alleys, 1117 P street, Wednesday evening at 6 P. M. It was necessary to schedule the match at this time as the alleys are reserved for regular league teams later in the evening.

Both colleges have organized their best teams and will go upon the runways with full confidence of winning the series.

It is expected that a large crowd of student spectators will witness the match. Widespread interest in the first of the intercollegiate bowling matches is being taken not only by the Law and Dents, but by the student body at large.

Other matches will probably be rolled in the near future. The Bands can organize a good team and will doubtless challenge one of the above teams for a match game as soon as they see the outcome of Wednesday's match. The Arts and Science College bowling enthusiasts have also expressed a desire to participate in the contests, and will commence immediately to organize a team.

The "Dents" lineup has already been announced but the Law will not be sure of the five they will use until they lineup on the runways for the match.

Wolverine Style Will Be Studied By Gopher Coach
When Coach Bill Spaulding packed

his suitcase last night and, accompanied by Assistant Coach Len Frank, had his ticket punched for Ann Arbor, it was for more than a pleasure trip. Bill has an idea tucked away somewhere, that his next rival, Hurry Up Yost of Michigan, is going to show about all he has to beat Wisconsin this afternoon on Ferry Field. And Bill wants to be there to see how its done.
