The Pastor Says: I prefer the township cosmopolitan who knows all classes in his neighborhood to the man who is at home in all lands but is not acquainted with his ashman.—John Andrew Holmes.

The proposal of a college course in thinking should not be rejected thoughtlessly. In the first place, it is to be limited to freshmen, who will accept it stoically as a new form of laziness. In the second place, no such course can be given until there is an instructor for it. As this means taking some graduate student from the preparation of a thesis on the lack of material regarding the development of radio among the Visigoths and training him to use his mind, there will be considerable delay in establishing the course of thinking.

The ominous part of the proposal is that thinking be thought of as part of the purpose in all undergraduate courses—a secondary purpose, of course, but still a purpose. This is a revolutionary suggestion. It may be doubted whether the advocates of so radical an innovation were thinking into colleges will upset the curriculum. Many courses will have to be scrapped; some will have to be renovated. The whole principle is wrong. Thinking should remain an outside inactivity.—New York Evening Post.

The night for the annual Kosmet Klub production has been declared a close one by the committee on student activities with the added provision that no precedent is being set by the action. The musical play, written and produced by students, has a recognized standing among the students and deserves the recognition given by the committee. With continued success in its productions, Kosmet Klub may well be given the privilege of having a closed night each spring for the presentation of its play, boost for the worthwhile kind of student activities and practically insures the success of the 1923 play, "The Yellow Lantern."

It may be necessary for the baseball team to journey south in order to have any practice before the opening of the season on account of the inclement weather. Last spring, the Husker baseball squad trained in Oklahoma, but the weather was rainy there, depriving them of the advantages sought. The Armory is wholly inadequate for indoor practice and the coach is up against a stiff proposition in trying to turn out a championship nine. With the coming of spring vacation, the athletic department will have an opportunity to take the baseball men to good weather if good weather will not come to them. The men deserve the training trip and necessity almost demands it.

Every week sees closer to the passage of the bill in the legislature authorizing the University Board of Regents to receive donations for the building of dormitories on or near the campus. There seems to be little or no opposition to the plan of authorizing the usage of private capital to hasten the erection of these buildings.

If the bill is finally sanctioned, the freshmen entering Nebraska within a few years will find much more adequate arrangements for their supervision. The dormitory system, like the Memorial Stadium, seems to be changing from a dream into a reality.

The "Ags" are displaying fine Nebraska spirit in the purpose of their big convocation Tuesday. They propose to outline methods by which they will be able to most effectively tell their home folks of the advantages of Nebraska during spring vacation.

McIntyre and Heath the noted comedians right in the midst of a few of the beautiful girls in "Red Pepper" coming to the Orpheum for Saturday matinee and night, March 24.

They propose to boost their school and to replace false stories of student activities here with the true stories of the accomplishments and prevalent state of affairs.

Why let the Ags be the only ones to further this worthy movement? Other colleges have five days left to organize similar movements, the benefits of which are evident. Many people of the state do not realize the needs of the University. No one has a better knowledge of these needs than those who are on the campus nine months out of the year. Who will be the first to follow the lead of the Ags?

The list of attractions promised at the Orpheum Theater is distinguished with the appearance of McIntyre and Heath, who are scheduled for the Orpheum Saturday matinee and night, March 24. The noted comedians are repeating their success of last season called "Red Pepper." Titles in this instance mean nothing but it might be of interest to know that "Red Pepper" is a race horse, which goes to the post with all the earthly belongings of "Henery" and "Alexander" staked on him to win. Edgar Smith and Emily M. Young have extended their imagination and given to the stage one of the funniest plays McIntyre and Heath have ever appeared in.

A feature of this engagement which will be appreciated by local theatergoers is the fact that the Messrs. Shubert have retained the same splendid cast as seen at the Shubert Theater, New York, to support the noted comedians. Not in one instance has the cast been changed. This brings here such splendid players as Florence Rayfield, Calhoun Sisters, Dan Quinlan, Fooshee Sisters, Cyril Delevanti, Harry Wayne, Doris Wayne, Sidney Boyd, Alice Rector, Jack Ryan, Brennan and Sands, Bee Ho Gray, Ada Summerville, Frank Williamson and the fastest and most beautiful chorus of girls ever assembled.

A conservative is one who believes in everything that will preserve his present advantage.

We blame human nature for our meanness, but we take personal credit for our piety.
