The benefits of our new system of dividing the vacation periods of the school year are realized today more than at any other time. A ten-day break in the middle of the second semester is always welcomed. Spring vacation is now as long or longer than any vacation between September and June.

To go on a spring vacation with the ground covered with snow is not an ordinary occurrence, but it may have the effect of making us all more industrious during our absence from the campus.

The final call for organization pictures for the 1923 Cornhusker brings us to a realization that the year book will make its appearance before many weeks.

The staff will not let up on its steady grind of turning out a representative book during the vacation period. The two or three weeks immediately following vacation will see the close of the work of the Cornhusker except for the final details of actual printing. Orders for the annual are still being taken at the Cornhusker office, but the present subscription list insures the widest circulation in the history of Nebraska annals.

Statistics given out some time ago by the Dean of Women showed that co-eds who lived in sorority houses or dormitories where study was supervised, had better scholarship averages than those girls who did not have the advantage of supervised study. It is interesting to see how these statistics are borne out in the Phi Beta Kappa awards for excellent scholarship made public yesterday.

As the dormitory system has hardly been in effect long enough to have its beneficial effects in scholarship show in the present senior class, we must look to the proportion of sorority women in the honor list. Forty per cent of the girls receiving the P. B. K. keys are members of sororities. This is a much higher proportion than the per cent of sorority women to the total co-ed registration. The figures collected by the Dean of Women are clearly shown to be facts by the P. B. K. awards.

A student organization which is representative, popular and which has brought nationwide notice to itself and to the University is the Pershing Rifles, honorary cadet drill company. Started thirty-one years ago by General Pershing, it has had a steady growth and an honorable history.

It played a prominent part in the welcome extended to Pershing when he visited the University at the time of the Notre Dame football game. It is a democratic organization—one in which merit counts. The plan of nationalizing the organization should be given careful consideration by the honor company. If it will be able, in this way, to spread its fine ideals through the regiments of cadets at other colleges, there should be no hesitation as to the course to be followed.

"Guests" rather than "opponents." This is the sign that appears on the scoreboard on the athletic field of one University. This substitution shows the new spirit of sportsmanship which is coming to the front rapidly in intercollegiate athletic contests of all kinds. This is the kind of sportsmanship recommended by the commissioner of athletics of the "Big Ten" Conference in a speech to the delegates to the Midwest Student Conference at Northwestern University a few days ago.

The change on a scoreboard from "opponent" to "guest" in itself is a small matter but the spirit back of the change is an idea which is worthy and should be predominant in every college.

Twenty-three colleges were represented at the Conference at Northwestern and subscribed to this spirit of good sportsmanship. Nebraska did not have a delegate at the meeting but the thought emphasized there can nevertheless be put into effect.

First, let us make sure that we treat contesting teams as "guests" rather than "opponents," then let us see that the new scoreboard in the Memorial Stadium spells the new spirit in terms of black and white.
